THIS IS YOUR LAST CHANCE

Perhaps you've been delaying the sowing of your WINTER wheat waiting for good weather and for the ground to be in perfect condition. If so, you can't afford to delay any longer. Wheat is a hardy crop and can be sown successfully if the ground is moderately dry and workable. So get your seed sown at the earliest moment. Mid-February is as late as you can delay sowing most varieties, though "Squarehead's Master" may be sown up to the end of February.

If you miss sowing winter wheat you may lose your chance of sharing in the profitable market the Government assures, and getting the good prices that have been guaranteed.

Sow WINTER WHEAT now!

Guaranteed Prices.
23/6 per barrel during September, October, November, and December; 26/- per barrel after January 1st. These prices are for wheat bushelling 60 lb. For wheat of a higher or lower bushel weight the price will vary 3d. per lb. up or down, as the case may be.

R.D.S. NEW HALL

ACCOMMODATION FOR INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITS

The Serpentine Hall, the Royal Dublin Society's new permanent premises for the accommodation of industrial exhibits at Ballsbridge, will be ready three weeks before the date of the Spring Show and Fair (May 5).

This building has been found necessary owing to the fact that the big Saorstat Hall, which was opened as a trade exhibition in May last, has been booked out. The new hall will have an area of 14,000 super-feet, and will occupy a central position in the show grounds, being immediately adjoining the machinery paddock. From the points of view of finish, lighting and lay-out, it will be fully equal to the Saorstat Hall. Through it the Royal Dublin Society will be able to accommodate the numerous Saorstat manufacturers who have not obtained space in the other halls. Both the Saorstat Hall, the Main Hall and the Main Hall annexe have been booked out for the coming event. Including the bookings in the machinery paddock, which are on a much heavier scale than usual, close on 200,000 super-feet of space actually have been taken by trade exhibitors, and this within three weeks of the opening date for receiving applications.

Work on the Serpentine Hall was begun last autumn, as the Society visualised what the position might be in 1936, and took the necessary steps to meet it.

FROM THE NORTHERN CAPITAL

The Constitution : Transport : Dublin-Belfast Debate : Harbour Trade : Atlantic Air Service : Farmers and "Dole" Bill

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.
BELFAST, Friday.

It is beginning to dawn gradually upon the people of Northern Ireland how they are being deprived of the historic guarantees for the liberty of the subject embodied in the British Constitution. The Magistrates Bill emphasised this more than any previous legislation; for it has a wider application, and touches the people at many points. Magna Charta and Habeas Corpus were thrown overboard fourteen years ago, first as a temporary measure renewable year by year, and later as part of the law of the North. How far the Northern Government has travelled away from the historic position which gives all citizens guarantees of liberty, but also from the present British Constitution, was emphasised by an address by Mr. George McElroy, an ex-Resident Magistrate, to the Central Presbyterian Association. No one who understands the historic position, and appreciates the fight which the people in the past made for the maintenance of their rights of freedom, can feel anything but anxious at the lighthearted manner in which those rights and privileges have been thrown overboard in the North. It is hardly sufficient to say that if everyone obeys the law they need have no fear that these powers will be exercised. The same could have been said of the laws and the Star Chamber in former days, and it does not get over the natural repugnance in ordinary people against the delegation of excessive powers of arrest and detention to any person. It is admitted that these powers were given at a period of great lawlessness, and that even yet there is a not inconsiderable section which refuses to recognise either the Northern Government or the Courts. Adequate measures could be taken, however, to deal with any situation likely to arise without a permanent statute, which places the people of Northern Ireland outside the freedom guaranteed by the British Constitution in a United Kingdom, of which Northern Ireland is an integral part.

Transport Charges

Complaints have been made that since the Northern Transport Board was established the charges for passenger fares and goods have increased on the road motor services. The Chairman of the Road Transport Board (Mr. D. L. Clarke) has dealt with the assertion that the passenger fares on omnibuses have increased. It is possible that the freight charges have been increased in recent months, but this is not surprising, in view of the fact that the extreme competition among road carriers had reduced charges to an uneconomic level. One correspondent in the Press complained that there had been an increase in the charge of 6d. for carrying a cwt. chest of tea from Belfast to Coleraine. It must be obvious that no undertaking could continue to exist with charges of that kind, and that it was this hopeless competition which almost ruined the railways. It is to be hoped that the Rates Tribunal foreshadowed in the Transport Bill will now be brought into existence. The pooling arrangement between the railways and road transport will not take effect for another six months, and, no doubt, all questions of fares and freights will be settled before that period. There is one respect in which it is hoped that fares and charges will not be increased, and that is in providing motor transport for the tourist traffic. A promise that this would not happen was given when the Transport Bill was going through Parliament.

Wireless Debate

A wireless debate will take place on the 11th February between Belfast and Dublin. Speakers representing the Queen's University, Belfast, and Trinity College and University College, Dublin, will take part, and the debate is expected to last about forty-five minutes. The subject of the debate will be: "That material progress has been a deterrent to culture and development." Mr. Justice Meredith will give a summing-up of the various points raised by the speakers. Mr. D. Neill, of Trinity College, and Mr. D. Bell, of University College, Dublin, will support the motion, which will be opposed by Mr. E. James and Mr. B. McCall, of Queen's University. This will be the first of what may be a long series of inter-change programmes between Belfast and Dublin. There are many items in the Belfast programmes which, no doubt, Free State listeners would like to hear; but, with the present low-powered station operating in Belfast, this is impossible. When the new Northern station near Lisburn is opened in March the Free State radio enthusiasts will be able to listen to Belfast with any modern valve set. Northern listeners frequently switch over to Athlone for dance music, gramophone records and other broadcasts, and the last Free State election results broadcast from Athlone aroused great interest in the North.

The statistics issued by the Belfast Harbour Board showing the exports and imports through the port of Belfast for the past year, and comparing these with the corresponding items of the previous year, present a vivid picture of the industry of the Northern capital and province. The returns indicate a great improvement in trade in every branch of export, with the exception of linen. While the export of linen goods decreased from 38,909 tons to 34,997 tons last year, the import of flaxseed from abroad increased from 945 tons to 1,008 tons, indicating that farmers are paying more attention to this crop. The natural result of this will be probably a big reduction next year in the imports of flax. Last year almost 19,000 tons of flax were brought into Belfast for the linen industry. At a price of, roughly, over £50 per ton this represents over £1,000,000 sent out of Ireland for flax, at least half of which could easily have been grown at home. The amount of coal imported into Belfast last year was 1,331,687 tons—less than a thousand tons more than the year before. This represents an import trade of nearly two millions sterling. Coal is a great barometer of industry. The fact that the importation increased slightly indicates that industry has not gone back, although a larger quantity than in the previous year was required both for the Electricity Station and the Belfast Gas Works. The former is supplying electricity to an ever-widening area of Northern Ireland through the Northern Electricity Board. The improvement in shipbuilding is indicated by the increase in the importation of iron and steel plates from 42,055 tons to 50,254 tons.

Atlantic Air Service

In view of the proposed experimental air service across the North Atlantic which is to be undertaken this year, a lecture given by Mr. G. L. Walter, of Imperial Airways, Ltd., to the members of the Belfast Chamber of Commerce is of special interest. For the Atlantic service a new flying-boat is being created, known as the Mayo composite flying-boat. This new design, it is expected, will get over the difficulty of getting a heavily laden 'plane into the air. It comprises two machines locked together, one on top of the other. The upper one will be heavily laden with petrol and mails, and the bottom, and larger, one with little petrol and no mails. The two machines will take off together as one, and when they have reached a certain height the machines unlock and the lower one returns to the base, leaving the other to continue on its journey. The Imperial Airways, which will work the British end of the North Atlantic service, with a landing place on the West coast of Ireland, is also contemplating another route to America—via Lisbon, Azores and Bermuda, and for this service they are building flying-boats capable of seating 50 to 60 passengers.

Farm Labourers

The Ulster Farmers' Union is organising a series of meetings to protest against the proposed bill to extend unemployment insurance to farm workers. Agricultural workers in Great Britain will have the benefit of the Unemployment Insurance Act. A scheme has been devised which will operate apart from the ordinary unemployment insurance scheme, with lower contributions and smaller benefit scales. Under the re-insurance agreement between Northern Ireland and Great Britain both areas have to keep in step in regard to unemployment legislation. The Ulster farmers, however, contend that even the reduced scale of benefits contemplated in the bill are too high for Northern Ireland and will prove an inducement to idleness rather than work, for the unemployed labourer will get as much in benefit as he would if he were in a job. Until the benefit scales appear in their final form in the British House of Commons it is not possible to say if there is any great substance in this argument. If it should prove that the benefit scales are higher than wages it may be taken that the complaints made by Labour members in the Northern Parliament that the wages of agricultural labourers are too low, have been justified, and it would appear that a good case exists for the establishment of a Wage Board to fix scales of wages in various districts. It is admitted that labourers in Northern Ireland have concessions not available in Britain in regard to cheap houses and cheap food, but, even allowing for these, the benefit scales cannot be regarded as more than a mere subsistence level. The Northern Minister of Labour is anxious to retain the social services in Northern Ireland on the same level as in Great Britain, and this is the settled policy of the Government and people. Other insured workers will resent any step which might endanger the re-insurance agreement, and the general public will feel that when farmers are being assisted by marketing and other schemes, largely at the expense of the consumer, they should endeavour to assist their farm labourers, whose wages, admittedly, are on a very low scale.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

THE LATE KING

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—As one who joined the Roman Catholic Church recently, it seems to me that the Catholics of this country have been very badly let down by their Church and its teachings in not being given an opportunity of joining in some form of public prayer or Requiem Mass for such a noble and good man as our late King George V., who has done more for Ireland than any other English King.

I, among many others in the same position, attended the Memorial Service at St. Patrick's Cathedral in the full intention of doing a right and courteous act.—Yours, etc.,

"K. E. R."

Co. Dublin, January 30th, 1936.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I have read the letters from Catholics in your paper, and would like to join with them in saying that it is most regrettable that a Solemn High Mass could not have been celebrated for the late King. All Catholics, however, know that Mass cannot be said for the repose of the soul of one who did not die a Catholic. If there is a doubt on this point, I believe the ecclesiastical authorities allow it full benefit, but we are reasonably certain that the King died a convinced Protestant.

Mass can, however, be offered for a private intention, and it may safely be assumed that a great many of us have availed ourselves of this privilege and have each asked for a Mass to be said for our intention, which is for the repose of the King's soul.

A number of us have also been asking why no public Service or some form of public prayer could not have been ordered. I notice that in London and in Canada the situation has been treated as one of national emergency, and public Services and prayers have been offered in the Catholic churches for the guidance of the new King and the welfare of the State in its tribulation. The Church tries to induce her people to regard all the events of life from the religious angle, but when such action involves public Services she would be reluctant to allow them for an object which, though the majority would agree was a worthy one, yet many would consider had a political bias by reason of being public. It is most regrettable that allegiance to the British throne is only tacitly acknowledged by the majority here, merely out of fear of the consequences should it be repudiated. To these a public demonstration would have been distasteful, as involving too marked a recognition of the Imperial connection, and I think that here we may, perhaps, find the point of view which has disallowed a public Service.—Yours, etc.,

"ANOTHER CATHOLIC."

London, January 29th, 1936.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I would like to say how much I agree with Captain Cosby's letter in your issue of the 30th inst. concerning the disgraceful behaviour of the Irish broadcasting authorities on the evening of January 20th, and also to say a few words on the subject.

I think the action of the Irish broadcasting authorities on that evening, in playing jazz music, was not only showing their indifference towards a friendly neighbour in trouble, but also showing their ignorance of ordinary nice feeling. It was a most unchristian act, and an act that shows Ireland in its worst light to other countries; and I am sure that it will make all right-thinking Irishmen smart when they think of the part their radio transmitting station played at such a time of world grief.—Yours, etc.,

RITA HARVEY.

Marino, Howth, January 31st, 1936.

THE DUBLIN "ZOO"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I see in to-day's Irish Times that the Government grant to the Dublin Zoological Gardens has been increased. I am sure a great many visitors to the Gardens will hope, as I do, that the increased funds will be spent not so much in adding new animals to the "Zoo's" collection as on improving the accommodation of some already there which are kept in very confined cages or enclosures. Not only for the sake of the animals themselves, but in the interests of the "Zoo" as an institution this would be desirable. Lions, tigers and bears with some space to move about in and some variety of environment (such as all modern "Zoos" aim at giving) are far more interesting and attractive to the visitor than the same animals shut in three or four yards of space can be. I am told that in this respect our "Zoo" is far behind others—behind those of Belfast and Edinburgh, for instance, to say nothing of "Zoos" in larger centres.—Yours, etc.,

R. JACOB.

19 Ely place, Dublin,
January 30th, 1936.

"AFTER THREE YEARS"

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your admirable leader on the third year of the German National Socialist Party there are certain statements on which I would ask your permission to comment. To what extent can it be justly claimed that a people have recovered their self-respect when the régime by which they are governed is built and sustained on fear: internal fear by reason of which no citizen dare open his mouth if not in praise of everything that is Nazi, or any newspaper express the most infinitesimal disapproval; and external fear subtly fostered by the creation of the bogey of foreign aggression?

I cannot see any possible parallel between our own Government and that of Hitler. In Germany who would think of taking the consequences of castigating Hitler in speech or Press? As for the German sin of persecution of the Jews, they and the whole world will one day quail in its expiation.—Yours, etc.,

HENRY M. SINCLAIR.

4 Grafton street, Dublin,
January 31st, 1936.

SCHOOL HOURS

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I have seen it stated several times lately that women are not vocal enough in public affairs. There is one matter at least on which they have been vocal both in public and in private, but without any success—viz., the matter of school hours.

The majority of children in this country are compelled to attend school daily from 9 until 3, with half hour interval for refreshment. This means that they sit in crowded class-rooms during all the best part of the day. In the winter time it is a brave teacher indeed who will insist on keeping the windows open to allow in the fresh air. In the middle of the day the children go out for half an hour to eat their piece of bread and butter, and then return to the half-aired class-room for the rest of the afternoon. At 3 o'clock they go home for the dinner, which has more often than not, been kept hot for them for a couple of hours.

How can children thrive and develop under such conditions? They do not. We see the results in the epidemics that sweep the schools in the winter, in the coughs and colds from which children suffer perpetually, and which should be unknown to young healthy growing boys and girls, in the stooped shoulders and misshapen forms caused by sitting over desks, without any corrective drill or exercises and sports out of doors. We deprive our town children of all contact with or knowledge of Nature except at second-hand. No time is allowed them to go out and see Nature for themselves. Book-learning is regarded as the only kind of learning, and we try to pour that into them all day long, whether they are in a fit condition to receive it or not. Any teacher in our schools will tell you that in the afternoon the children are dull and heavy and difficult to teach. How could they be otherwise, deprived of proper nourishment and the joy of running about and exercise natural to young things?

A complete change is necessary for the sake of both the health and the education of the children. A start could be made very simply by increasing the midday interval to one and a half hours to allow the children time to eat their dinner and to get a little fresh air. During this time the class-rooms could be thoroughly aired. The afternoon hours should be devoted, by the younger children at least, to drill and sports and bodily exercises, or excursions into the country.

This might have to be modified in the case of older children, but in all cases bodily exercises and outdoor sports should be regarded as a part of education.—Yours, etc.,

W. R. O'HEGARTY.

Highfield House, Rathgar, Dublin,
January 31st, 1936.

Nansen took a chance
... and what a chance

In 1893, Dr. Nansen, the Norwegian, set sail from Christiania for the North Pole. His boat, the Fram, was especially shaped so as to rise when squeezed by ice. He planned to steam to the New Siberia Islands, to let the Fram become frozen in, and thus be carried by currents on its way. The Fram drifted for nearly two years taking Nansen many miles towards the Pole and establishing his name as a great explorer.

Nansen took an enormous chance and won. There are chances to-day if you will take them. 10/- spent on a ticket, for instance, secures you a chance of £30,000 and all the freedom and happiness it can buy.

Get your ticket early!

Last day for receiving subscriptions March 3rd. Draw takes place March 24th. Race will be run at Aintree, Liverpool, March 27th.

HOW TO FIND MINERALS

PAYING PROSPECTORS TO MAKE IT PAY

Here is a new way of developing a country's mineral resources. The credit for it belongs to Southern Rhodesia.

Following a scheme of cash rewards for successful prospectors in that country, twenty-five prospectors are now to be furnished with licences and equipment, paid an allowance of £20 a month as remuneration, and told to go and prospect. Applications have been invited, and are being received, from all over the country.

Under the terms of the agreement by which the scheme will operate, prospectors after making discoveries will register them. The "finds" will be examined and valued by Government mining engineers, and the prospectors will then be given the choice either of having the properties sold or of working them on their own account.

CONVICTS BURNED TO DEATH

TERRIBLE FATE OF TWENTY NEGROES

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SCOTTSBORO (ALABAMA), Friday.

TRAPPED in a locked wire cage in a prison lorry in which they were being transported, twenty negro convicts were burned to death to-day when the lorry caught fire. Two others received injuries which are expected to prove fatal.

According to the prison wardens the convicts, who were classed as "bad," had been placed on the lorry to be taken to work a rock crusher on a road.

Owing to the severe cold they were permitted to light a fire in a tin inside the lorry, in which a thirty gallon drum of petrol was being carried. The jolting of the lorry sliding on the ice-covered road apparently caused the petrol to splash out on to the fire, and the lorry itself instantly became a mass of flames.

The warden states that the first intimation he received that anything was wrong was the screams for help from the trapped convicts.

BLAZING INFERNO

The lorry was stopped and the prison officers opened the wire cage as quickly as possible. Two of the negroes who were near the door were rescued, but by this time the cage had become a blazing inferno and it was impossible to reach the others.

When the firemen reached the scene they found twenty bodies burned to an unrecognisable condition.

The two negroes who were extricated are so badly burned that there is no chance of their recovery.

The two wardens who were in charge of the convicts were burnt about the face and hands in trying to drag the shrieking victims from the blaze.

RESTOCKING OF WATERS

MEMBERSHIP FEE TO BE INCREASED

DURING the past year 70,000 ova were hatched at the Zoological Gardens, Dublin, and over 27,000 at the Dublin Trout Anglers' Association hatchery, Templeogue. The fry were placed in the Liffey and Tolka Rivers. In addition, about 300 yearlings were raised in the Association's hatchery and placed in the Liffey. They hoped to extend their hatchery this year to accommodate 75,000 ova, and the Zoological Society had also promised their assistance, whilst they had applied to the Department of Fisheries for 150,000 ova.

These facts were mentioned in the report submitted by the Honorary Secretary at the annual meeting of the Dublin Trout Anglers' Association, in the Dolphin Hotel, Dublin, last night.

The report further stated that though the number of members had fallen off slightly there were still 307 on the books, and their financial position was sound, despite the expenses involved in erecting a hatchery at Templeogue, the establishment and upkeep of which in the past year cost about £84. Much of that expenditure would be non-recurring, but if they were to extend their operations they must expect heavy charges on revenue for ova, etc. They had spent over £38 on ova in the past year without drawing on reserves, but the Committee felt that unless the revenue increased or the expenditure decreased they would be compelled to draw on their reserves each year. The Association was formed for the purpose of improving the fishing around Dublin, and expenditure on restocking must be regarded as a first charge on their funds.

The Association was much indebted to Dr. Ferrar and the Committee of the Zoological Gardens for their help in hatching ova. Dr. Ferrar had always given his time and knowledge most ungrudgingly to the Association. Mr. Walsh, the owner of the ground where the hatchery was situated, had been co-opted a vice-president, and thanks were due to him and to Miss Walsh for the great assistance they had given.

With deep regret, the committee recorded the deaths of Dr. Gerard Browne and Mr. J. Ganly, two of their vice-presidents, and also the deaths of Mr. Rowland Sothern, of the Department of Fisheries, and Mr. O'Flanagan.

On the motion of the president of the Association (Mr. E. P. McCarron) and Dr. R. P. McDonnell (vice-president), the report and statement of accounts were carried unanimously.

The outgoing officers and members of the committee were re-elected.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION

A discussion took place as to the desirability of increasing the annual subscription, in view of the increasing expenditure, especially in connection with the hatchery and re-stocking of the Liffey.

Mr. L. Gaffey said that their first consideration was re-stocking the waters with abundant fry and as many yearlings as possible. They hoped to extend their operations in the current year, and to put 150,000 ova in the hatcheries. That would involve increased expenditure, which would bring them to the limit of their resources, and he suggested that next year the annual subscription should be increased.

The chairman (Mr. McCarron) said that this was a matter that affected the welfare of the Association, but the increase could not come into operation until next year.

Mr. O'Donovan suggested that, instead of spending money on hatching ova, they should buy a couple of thousand two-year-old fish and put them in the river.

Dr. Falvey opposed the idea of increasing the subscription. A large membership with a small subscription was more desirable. Increasing the subscription might eventually lead to a small membership comparable to one of the syndicates. The Department, he said, gave ova free to country clubs, and why should not their association get ova at reduced rates?

The Secretary (Mr. Ryder) said that the Department usually gave the association a few thousand ova free.

Mr. Gaffey pointed out that under an order of the Department two-year-old fish could not be introduced into the country; but, even if they could be got, they would be much more expensive than hatching ova.

After further discussion, it was decided, on the motion of Mr. Dowling, that the membership fee should be increased to ten shillings a year as from 1st January, 1937.

IRISH HOMESPUN EXHIBITION

Following on the success of their exhibition in October, the Irish Homespun Society hopes to hold another show and sale next May, at about the time of the Royal Dublin Society's Spring Show.

At the October sale over three-quarters of the exhibits, involving over one thousand yards of material, were sold, and the proceeds, including knitting wools, knee rugs, etc., amounted to about £240.

The organisers state that at the last show there were too many pieces of grey tweed submitted, and makers are advised to pay more attention to bright colours. No tweed will be accepted for which more than 4s. 6d. per yard single width is required, and the society will deduct 2s. in the pound to defray expenses, as the last exhibition would not have paid its way had it not been for private subscriptions.

Only vegetable dyes may be used, and the tweed submitted must be in lengths of 30 yards by 30 inches wide.

THIRTY-SEVEN DEAD

INDIAN MINE DISASTER

SEVERAL FIRES STILL RAGING

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CALCUTTA, Friday.

THE death roll in the Loyabad Colliery disaster at Jharia, Bihar Province, is now officially placed at thirty-seven—four British, one Italian, and thirty-two Indians. Twenty-three Indians are injured.

The names of the British victims are given as:—J. Brown, of Whitehaven; B. J. Starks-Field, of Anfield Plain, Durham; Henry Lawton, of Wimbledon, and W. Hayman. Hayman's father is chief accountant of the Tatas Iron Works at Jamshedpur.

The other European victim is G. Boskello, an Italian.

The disaster was due, it is understood, to fire and airblast which occurred during the carrying out of protective work with a view to the isolation of an underground fire.

HEROIC RESCUE EFFORTS

There was an explosion, and large numbers of men were entombed. Volunteer rescue parties made desperate and hroic efforts to reach the victims.

At the pithead there were tragic scenes. Women screamed as their husbands and sons were brought to the surface. Police pickets were needed to control the crowd of anxious watchers. Eventually the authorities ordered the rescue parties to abandon their attempts, in view of the danger of a further explosion.

Forty-five fires are now raging in the Jhara coalfields. It is reported from New Delhi that the Government of India will introduce shortly emergency legislation to deal with the situation.

The proposals under consideration are to pierce the river bed and flood the mines or to build an underground wall and imprison the fires.

PORTORA SCHOOL APPOINTMENT

DUKE OF GLOUCESTER'S LETTER TO GOVERNORS

At the quarterly meeting of the Board of Governors of Portora Royal School, Enniskillen, the Bishop orf Clogher, D.D., Chairman, presiding,

The Head Master, Mr. Ian Stuart, M.A., reported that there was an increase in the numbers, and that the school was now full, and that there was no accommodation for further boarders until after the opening of the new preparatory school, which would take place in six weeks' time.

In room of Mr. Nicholas (of Mourne Grange School staff), who had been appointed to the staff and since died, the Board appointed a brilliant classical scholar to the staff, Mr. A. C. Moorhouse, a scholar of King Edward College, Birmingham, and Caius College, Cambridge, where he graduated with a double First Class Honours degree in Classics. Mr. Moorhouse won many prizes, including a special one for Greek Verse, by being awarded a grant from the Jebb Fund, with which to tour and study in Italy.

NAMING THE NEW SCHOOL

The Chairman announced that he had received word from the Private Secretary to the Duke of Gloucester, stating that His Royal Highness had great pleasure in complying with the Bishop's request to allow the Headmaster and Governors of Portora to name the new preparatory school "Gloucester House."

The Chairman stated that in his reply of thanks to the Duke for his never-to-be-forgotten readiness to grant their request, he said:—"The memory of the visit of His Royal Highness to Colebrooke will be handed down from one generation of pupils to another."

CHURCH OF IRELAND YOUTH CONFERENCE

The Church of Ireland Youth Conference was continued last night in the Metropolitan Hall, Lower Abbey street, Dublin, the Archbishop of Dublin presiding.

The Rev. St. John Pike gave an address on "Christianity in Daily Life." Jesus Christ, he said, should enter into their leisure. It was important for this generation of young people to learn to have Jesus Christ in leisure, as in all departments of daily life.

Miss Longworth Dames made an appeal for family prayers. Families were not out of date, she said, and praying was not out of date, and why, then, should family prayers be out of date?

Dr. Smith, Assistant Bishop of Lagos, appealed for young men and women to fill "the ranks of Christ's workers overseas."

The Rev. Canon Rich said that since they seemed to realise the terrible problems of the world to-day, the Christian revolution would begin to work, if they realised also that Jesus Christ was their Saviour.

Others on the platform included Mr. J. Keegan, Miss L. Synge, Miss P. B. Eustace, Mr. J. May, Mr. S. Scott and Mr. G. McNeill.

SCHOOL-LEAVING AGE

IRISH VIEWS OF BRITISH BILL

EFFECT ON FREE STATE OPINION

THE provisions of the British bill for advancing the school-leaving age from 14 years to 15 years—announced in the Irish Times of yesterday—will give further strength to the feeling, already strong, in favour of like legislation in this country, and will tend at the same time to encourage the experiments mentioned in the report of the Free State Commission on the subject.

Such is the view held by prominent people who are interested in the State's educational progress. It is also felt that the English decision will have the effect of modifying to some extent the claims made for an immediate and general extension of the regulation in this country, in view of the immense difficulties and the doubtful cost involved.

Dr. T. J. O'Connell, General Secretary of the Irish National Teachers' Association, yesterday expressed his approval of the British measure, but, because the report of the Free State Commission had not yet been officially considered, he felt that he would not be justified in commenting on the matter in an official capacity. He was glad, however, to see the English move, and felt that their decision was bound to influence this country eventually if the Free State was to keep its place in the modern world.

MUCH TO BE DONE

Mr. G. J. Clampett, C.E.O., Rathmines Technical School, thought it interesting, in view of the recent controversy in this country, to note that the date of application in the case of the new English legislation was 1939. The important point was that obviously it was realised that there was a tremendous amount of work to be done before the extension of the school-leaving age could be applied. The necessary building accommodation, equipment, and properly trained teaching staffs had to be secured, and, above all, time was necessary to work out to the last detail a very carefully prepared scheme of instruction.

Personally he felt that in any extension of the school-leaving age, in the interests of the young people concerned it was necessary that the extended year, or years, should be spent in an entirely new environment, and that the scheme of instruction given to them should be on a vocational basis. They were not going to work out a scheme like that without giving it a great deal of thought, and consequently in the metropolitan area they could not apply an extension of the school-leaving age overnight, no matter how desirable it might be in the general interests of culture and education. He regarded the English report as squaring up very largely with the intention underlying the report of the Free State Commission of Inquiry in that in both cases a cautious policy had been adopted.

That from the Irish point of view the school-leaving age problem had yet to be satisfactorily settled, and that the report of the Commission issued recently was only the first phase in the effort to secure an advancement that was bound to come eventually, was the opinion expressed by Mr. E. Morton, Principal of Kevin Street, Dublin, Technical Schools. He held that in the urban areas here the school-leaving age should be raised, because, whatever might be said about the country districts, it needed only a walk around the city to see that a great number of youths were really going to waste, standing about the street corners. When they were over fourteen years, the only real benefit that school could confer on them would be to keep them out of contact with the influences of the street, because most of them would eventually find their way into unskilled employment.

QUESTION OF COST

He agreed that in all probability this country would in the long run be influenced by what had been done in that regard across the Channel; but, as shown in the details given concerning the English bill, a cost of £2,500,000 was enormous. The cost would be correspondingly heavy on this country, and such a scheme could only be promoted here in limited areas where the evils resulting from school-leaving at the age of fourteen were very apparent. An extension should be applied in urban areas in the first instance, and special schools needed to be established for the provision of more practical education.

Professor W. E. Thrift, T.D., said the English decision would strengthen the prevailing agitation in this country; but he added that he did not think that the attitude of the Government here was likely to be affected by it. The extension was bound to come in this country eventually; but before that a good deal of building would be necessary to render conditions adequate to it. He felt that there was a good deal of force in the arguments set out by the Free State Commission, but at the same time they could have excepted agricultural workers, and applied an extension to the towns. It would probably encourage the early application of the experiments referred to in the Report.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. James Dunlop, M.A., Belfast, commences a mission on Sunday in connection with Donore, Ormond quay and Adelaide road Presbyterian Churches. The Services will be held in Adelaide road Church to-morrow (Sunday) at 7; week-nights at 8 o'clock. Mr. Dunlop is well known in Dublin, and it is hoped that his Services will appeal to large numbers outside the membership of the congregations immediately concerned.

10,000 MILES ON HORSEBACK

FROM SOUTH TO NORTH AMERICA

How he journeyed on two mustangs from Buenos Ayres to Washington—a distance of over 10,000 miles—between 1925 and the close of 1928 was told by Mr. A. F. Tscheffely in his lecture before the Royal Dublin Society yesterday.

Before starting on his trip he was as normal a person as a schoolmaster could be. He wanted to get a change in life, as he had been teaching for twelve years—three in England and the rest in South America in an English college. He wanted to see the interior of South America, and the only ways of doing so were to go on foot, on mules, or on horseback. Another object that he had in mind was to prove that the mustang should be preserved from extinction. This horse was not known very well in Europe, at least, not in its purity. When the Spaniards discovered America there were no horses, but those which they introduced bred so rapidly that they overran the prairies of North America and the pampas of the South.

With the aid of excellent photographs, the lecturer showed what the real mustang is like. He himself had secured two ponies, one 16 and the other 18 years of age, and he stated that they looked as fresh to-day as when they started out on his tour.

The highest point he reached in the course of his tour was in the Andes, near La Paze, over 18,000 feet above sea level. During his two and a half years' journey he slept out in all sorts of places, and was not attacked by any wild beasts, although he heard many and saw some. He travelled extremely light, and took an interest in archæological remains.

He caused some laughter when he stated that part of his equipment was two revolvers; he could not shoot with one, but thought that two would look better.

A large audience enjoyed the lecture.

Argentina has protested to the League against the language used by M. Litvinoff during the hearing of the dispute between the U.S.S.R. and Uruguay at the last meeting of the League Council. Chile and Brazil also lodged protests, but it is not expected that any action will be taken.

CAIRO PEACEFUL AGAIN

NEUTRAL CABINET FORMED

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CAIRO, Friday.

Egypt entered on a new phase of her history to-day with the formation of a neutral Cabinet, under Ali Maher Pasha, to carry on an interim Government while a delegation representing the "United Front" of all parties will negotiate a new treaty of alliance with Great Britain.

This treaty will replace the present régime, under which Great Britain reserves for her control the famous four points of imperial communications, the defence of Egypt, the Sudan, and protection of foreign interests.

As a result of these developments a quieter atmosphere prevails in Egypt to-day than for many weeks past.

The negotiations for the treaty are likely to begin with Sir Miles Lampson on February 15. The Press hails the present compromise solution with great relief, although everyone realises that the path to a final settlement will not be smooth.

In his letter to King Fuad the Premier makes it clear that he regards it as his first duty to preserve national unity in order to achieve the national aspirations. Up to the present, however, the parties are far from agreement in regard to the division of seats at the elections on May 2nd.

How far this will affect national unity as regards the negotiations with Great Britain remains to be seen, but the Wafd has gained a point in securing a majority of representatives on the official delegation.

From the British point of view it is suggested this may be not unsatisfactory, since, if the Wafd element in the delegation can reach an agreement with the British negotiators, its acceptance by the other parties to the delegation would be a foregone conclusion.

A JAPANESE DENIAL

NO ALLIANCE WITH GERMANY

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

A denial of statements appearing in certain Paris newspapers to-day that a treaty of friendship, with the elements of a defensive alliance, had been signed by Germany and Japan, was issued by the Japanese Embassy here to-night.

"The report is totally unfounded, and no agreement of a political or military nature has been signed or negotiated of late," says the Embassy's statement.

Madame Genevieve Tabouis, Diplomatic Correspondent of the Left Wing Œuvre wrote to-day:—

"In spite of the denials the Wilhelmstrasse will seek to give to the news we publish, we are in a position to affirm that on January 4th last there was signed in Tokyo by the Japanese Foreign Minister and the German Ambassador a treaty of friendship, with the elements of a defensive alliance."

An earlier report of such an "alliance" was denied in messages from Tokyo and Berlin on January 20th.

A German Dance

I am interested to hear that the Deutsche Vereenigung (the German Society) in Dublin are holding their annual dance at the Metropole on Tuesday night next, and have secured the services of the famous German baritone, Herr Gerhard Husch (who has just finished a most successful tour of the Continent and England), for a brief song-recital before the dance begins at 9.30 sharp. Herr Husch, who will sing a selection of German Lieder songs, is one of the best known German operatic stars, and is also well known to English and Irish students of music through his recordings for Parlophone. His visit to the German Society's dance (which is under the patronage of the German Minister, Herr von Kuhlmann) ought to make the function one of the most popular of the season.

D.U.B.C.

I am interested to hear that the centenary of the foundation of the Dublin University Boat Club, which falls in the present year, will be celebrated by a centenary celebration dinner, to be held in the Dining Hall, Trinity College, on the night of Saturday, February 8th. Old members of the club are being specially invited to attend the dinner, and to bring guests with them; and it is hoped that there will be a very pleasant reunion of "past and present," and a multitudinous "swopping" of reminiscences and of rowing stories. There are few clubs which have done more to spread the fame of Irish sport and Irish athletics than the D.U.B.C., and sportsmen all over the country will wish the members a very pleasant evening's enjoyment, and the club many more centenaries, and many more years of successful performances on river and tideway.

Point-to-Points

Here we are at the opening of the point-to-point season, with a fixture early next week. There is no mistaking the popularity of the point-to-point in Ireland. In fact, it has always been a popular institution ever since the days when the British military made it a carnival in a small way. Those were the days when the races lasted three or four days at a time and the officers entertained the farmers royally—"eats" and all. In those days, too, the point-to-point was the hunters' paradise, where he had the field to himself. Not like now, when all sorts of equine celebrities are entered against him in competition. Now the only military point-to-point I know of is the Derry Garrison. But, of course, Ireland's big point-to-point fixture is that which features the Barbour Cup at Mullingar, run in connection with the Westmeath Hunt. It is the point-to-point equivalent of the Grand National. The Barbour Cup was presented about thirty years ago, when Mr. Frank Barbour was Master of the Westmeaths—at least, I think it must be about that period since this great sportsman led the Westmeaths, and it is a challenge cup. Then we have the Tipperary Hunt fixture, which is generally staged over Mr. Hanly's land at Lanespark. In the North, the County Down Staghounds' event takes place, I believe, at Ballyhaft, near Newtownards. Then there is usually a big gathering for the Old Rock, Chichester and Kilultagh—Mr. Willis's hunt fixture. It is held somewhere in Antrim, while the East Antrim hold a point-to-point at Glangorm. In Dublin and Meath Mr. Tom Dreaper is regarded as the champion point-to-point rider, while Mrs. Masters shines in Tipperary. There are others, of whom more anon.

Lord and Lady Plunket

I hear that Lord and Lady Plunket, who go cruising every winter, have already arrived in New York, en route for California. On this trip their party includes Mr. Roderic More O'Ferrall, of Kildangan, and his brother, Mr. Frank More O'Ferrall, of the Anglo-Irish Bloodstock Agency in London, and Sir Anthony Weldon.

I am, however, very perturbed to hear that Lord Plunket's brother, the Hon. Brinsley, has left Ireland and closed down Luttrellstown for two years. The Hon. Brinsley and Mrs. Plunket settled at Luttrellstown some few years ago, and their patronage of racing and other social activities here was very much appreciated. They were responsible for the advent of numbers of interesting visitors to Ireland, whom we shall now miss.

An Interrupted Stalk

The harsh weather of the last few days has brought large numbers of plover—green, grey and golden—down to the lower lands. Needless to say, a fair number of these have never returned to the safer uplands.

A friend whose love of sport has never left him, while pottering about at his daily labours, espied a fine stand of plover not too far off on a golf links. Seizing his gun, he slipped out quietly and began an elaborate stalk, which took him from green to green pretty well over the entire course, the wary plover taking alarm at intervals. At length he managed to locate them on one particular green, near which was a very convenient sandpit. An admirable place for a quick shot into "the brown."

With skill and wariness worthy of an Indian scout on the warpath, he gained the pit, and, crawling to the top, took a peep over. To his surprise, there were no plover to be seen. Just then a green plover flew overhead, shrieking its warning cry, and my friend thought to take a snap shot at it.

Up went his gun, away from beneath his feet crumbled the sand, and as the derisive plover winged off the real stand of golden clover rose and fled from nearby, where they had been concealed, while the luckless sportsman slid, amid a shower of sand and profanity, to the bottom of the sandpit.

About Smoking

I got talking recently with a friend who smokes nothing but herbs, both in his pipe and cigarettes, and he surprised me with one or two facts that were new to me. He is English, and he assured me that in his shire many people, as if by tradition, were partial to "tobacco" made of such herbs as coltsfoot, yarrow, mouse-ear, and actually, if it can be called a herb, lettuce! He told me that this kind of smoke was common long before the introduction of tobacco, and said that he had in his youth seen pipes that were, he thought, equally traditional—made of a stick of elder from which the pith had been removed, and a bowl of common clay hardened over the kitchen fire. (I had heard of the walnut shell and the straw, but not of this substitute.)

All this, plus the fact (also gleaned from my informant) that there was a Guild of Pipe-makers in London in 1601, throws grave doubts on the old story of Raleigh's servant who flung a dish of water over his master on seeing him smoking. Or is this one of the earliest Paddy-the-Irishman jokes, which first began with Tudor anti-Irish propaganda?

Everyone knows, I suppose, that smoking was a prehistoric habit (like lip-stick and such so-called modern "abominations")—even in England! Pipes have been found near the Roman wall in Northumberland and elsewhere, though what they smoked must have been herbs; and it is true that the earliest smokers of tobacco that we definitely know about were the American Indians.

How Lord Kelvin Lost a Bet

Lord Raleigh told an amusing story a few days ago in his address before the Physical Society in London of how he once made a bet of 5s. with Lord Kelvin about the atom. It was in May, 1904, when Lord Rutherford was making his first discoveries about the secrets of the atom. Lord Kelvin, though much interested in radio-activity, could not believe that it would result in the splitting up of atoms, and so Lord Raleigh ventured to ask him if he would make a bet of 5s. that within three or, at all events, six months he would not admit that Rutherford was right. Kelvin within the allotted time did change his mind, and at the meeting of the British Association in the following autumn he made a public pronouncement on the internal energy of radium. So the next time he saw Lord Raleigh he approached him and said: "I think I owe you 5s. Here it is." Lord Raleigh added that Kelvin expressed himself very strongly against using aeroplanes as a means of transport, and was quite emphatic in supporting a 10 m.p.h. speed-limit for motor cars.

Memorial Trees

When passing the house of a friend the other evening I noticed that he was in the garden, working by the light of an electric lamp over the hall-door. I stopped to see what he was doing at that hour of the night, and found that he was digging a hole in a sheltered corner. He told me that at this time of the year, as he had little available leisure during the day for gardening, he often worked by artificial light, but that, in any event, on this occasion he was doing a very special job that could not be deferred until the bright spring evenings. He was, he said, planting a flowering cherry tree in memory of King George V., and, he remarked that, as it was not yet too late in the season, many other people might do likewise if it were suggested to them in time. Not everyone would, perhaps, wish to plant cherries, which are rather dear, but my friend pointed out that there are many other kinds of flowering trees and shrubs that are quite inexpensive. Surely, he thought, it would be worth while sacrificing the pleasure of a little tobacco or a few sweets in order to save enough money to buy even one tree, which, if planted properly, would, of its own accord, delight all with its glorious garment of blossom in the spring.

The Persistent Salesman

While it may be all very well, and probably quite profitable, for manufacturing and distributing firms to have "house-to-house" salesmen, it is not at all pleasant for the inhabitants of the houses. What is not borne in mind by the employers of these salesmen is that the people in the houses have business also to attend, and that they cannot be worried by salesmen, no matter how pleasant their disposition may be. In the course of a single day recently a friend of mine was visited by over half a dozen such salesmen, each of whom desired to sell something which is easily procurable from the shops which cater for the particular household. The problem is becoming so serious that householders will have to do something to solve it; but it is to be hoped that American precedent will not be followed. In the Circuit Court of St. Louis a short while ago the jury held that firing a shotgun at a persistent salesman was not assault, and the prisoner at the bar was told to "go home and be a good boy." The injured salesman told the Court that he had "merely insisted upon seeing the lady of the house," while the prisoner insisted that he lived alone.

THE KING'S FUNERAL

OBSERVANCES IN COLLEGE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

TUESDAY last—the day of His late Majesty's funeral—was observed as a day of mourning throughout the University. The Vice-Provost (Mr. W. E. Thrift, M.A., S.F.,T.C.D.) and the Bursar (Mr. Robert Russell, M.A., S.F.,T.C.D.) represented the College at the official Memorial Service in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Sir Robert Tate, K.B.E., F.,T.C.D., also attended as representative of the British Legion, and Dr. R. J. Rowlette, T.D., as member for the University. A Memorial Service was held in the College Chapel, conducted by the Dean of Residence (the Rev. R. G. F. Jenkins, M.A.), and the two minutes' Silence was universally observed. No lectures were delivered on the day of the funeral, and all meetings and debates held during the week were adjourned after motions of sympathy with the Royal Family had been passed in silence. The Chancellor of the University (the Right Hon. the Earl of Iveagh, LL.D.) represented the University at the Royal Funeral Service in Windsor Chapel, the Vice-Chancellor (the Right Hon. Sir Thomas Molony, Bart., LL.D.) being present at the Requiem Mass at Westminster Cathedral.

DR. J. W. BIGGER.

The following official announcements were made during the week:—Professor J. W. Bigger, Sc.D., M.D., D.P.H., F.,R.C.P.I. (Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine), to be representative of the University on the General Medical Council; and Professor T. G. Moorhead, M.D., F.,R.C.P.I. (Regius Professor of Physic), to be representative of the University on the Irish Branch of the General Medical Council, in room of the late Professor A. F. Dixon, M.B., Sc.D. Both Professor Moorhead and Professor Bigger are outstanding figures in the Irish medical world.

Meetings and Debates

The programme of meetings and debates fixed for next week is as follows:—Monday, 3 p.m.—G.M.B. Inter-Debate between Dublin University History Society and College Gaelic Society on the motion: "That, historically speaking, the Irish nation does exist" (Mr. J. J. Auchmuty, M.A., Ph.D., in the chair); Monday night, 8 o'clock—Neophyte Debating Society (Mr. D. G. Neill (Mod., B.A.), Auditor, College Historical Society, in the chair); debate, "That this House considers Democracy to be a myth"; Monday night, 8 o'clock—G.M.B., College Theological Society; paper by Mr. A. Noble (Hon. Treasurer), on "Confirmation"; Tuesday afternoon, at 3.30 o'clock—D.U. Modern Language Society; paper by Mr. John Conan; Wednesday night, 8 o'clock—G.M.B., College Historical Society; debate, "That this House approves of the Imperial plea for expansion"; Thursday night, 8 o'clock—G.M.B., University Philosophical Society; paper by Mr. J. Boyle (Sch.) on "Gaelic and Anglo-Irish Literature."

The University Council meets on Tuesday next, February 4th.

Recruiting for the Dublin University Company of the Saorstát Volunteer Force has begun, and enrolments will be received during next week from 2.30 to 5 o'clock each afternoon in No. 4 West Chapel Buildings.

A Successful Dance

The term's dances began with the annual ball of the Neophyte Debating Society at the Hibernian Hotel, which proved, as usual, a very great success. The Elizabethan Society's dance, which is one of the pleasantest social events of the academic year, will take place on Monday week next, 10th February, at the Gresham Hotel, from 8 p.m to 1 a.m. Tickets may be obtained from the Hon. Secretary, Miss Betty Matthews, 6 Trinity College.

The select preacher to the University tomorrow will be the Very Rev. the Dean of Rochester (the Very Rev. Francis Underhill, D.D., Lambeth). Dr. Underhill, who is a well-known writer on theological subjects, is a graduate of Exeter College, Oxford, and has been select preacher to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge on many occasions. His latest book, "Christian Life in the Modern World," was published in 1934.

The congratulations of many friends within the University will be extended to Mr. E. S. Duthie, M.B., Ph.D. (Lecturer in Sheffield University), and to Miss Ruth Patten, M.Sc., Ph.D. (formerly Vice-Warden of Trinity Hall), on their recent marriage.

Four members of the Rugby Football Club played in the Irish Trial last Wednesday—Messrs. C. V. and C. A. Boyle, Mr. J. H. Jewell, and Mr. W. A. Pike. The first-named was selected to play for Ireland against England on Saturday next. Mr. C. A. Boyle (who scored a brilliant try after running nearly half the length of the field) and Mr. W. A. Pike both gave good displays, while Mr. Jewell did well in the short time in which he was playing.

MR. C. V. BOYLE.

One of the first Trinity College members of the Northern Ireland Inn of Court—Mr. E. W. Jones (Mod.), B.A.—was called to the Bar in Northern Ireland last week. Mr. Jones, who is an old boy of Portora, had a distinguished career, both in law and sport. He graduated with First-class Moderatorship in the former, and also with a First-class LL.B. degree, as well as captaining the D.U. Golf Club. He was a member of the Committee of the College Historical Society.

LETTERS FROM GERMANY—II.

The Diversions of Munich

THAT MATTER OF LANGUAGE

MUNICH.

MY DEAR CHARLES,—I hope you do not regard these letters of mine as an infliction. In one sense, I am the complete tourist, inasmuch as I always like to write home when I am abroad. In another sense, I surpass the complete tourist, because I write letters, whereas he generally confines himself to postcards. However, if my notes bore you, is not the fire adjacent at this time of year?

Have you decided to come over and join me for a week or so? I hope so sincerely, because it would be pleasant to have a companion to whom I could pour out my soul in the English tongue. Not that there is any lack of English among the Germans whom I have met. On the contrary, one German out of every three seems to have at any rate a stammering knowledge of my native tongue, and at least one out of every five talks it very passably. There have been, I must admit, occasions on which my scanty Italian and still scantier French has come in useful, particularly in ——, but where it was I shall leave you to find out for yourself! In any case, I should not regard it as impossible to manage my affairs in this country, even if I had no means at all of communicating with the natives; for they possess a most extraordinary faculty for anticipating one's intentions, and go to any amount of trouble to make one feel at home.

Anyhow, here I am sitting in the Hofbräu, alternately pulling at a large stone pot of dark beer—and beer it is, let me assure you—and scribbling these disjointed words. The Hofbräu really is a pub without peer. Picture to yourself some hundreds of people, planted at long tables, all with beer-mugs in front of them (steins for dark beer, and tall glass jugs, holding rather more, for light beer), talking, laughing singing, doing everything, in fact, short of getting disorderly enough to be thrown out. There is an orchestra playing Strauss in the gallery; and women are walking round among the tables, selling curious little dolls that totter round on their feet and lift tiny beer-jugs to their mouths when you wind them up. Can you conceive a pleasanter way of winding up a rather tiring day?

Up the Zugspitz

I can do with a sit-down and a stein of beer, having just returned from Garmisch and Partenkirchen, where preparations are in full swing for the Olympic WinterGames that are due to begin there on February 6th. The train carried me out from Munich this morning through the most exquisite country to the conjoined villages, where I studied the curious and charming houses, painted all over with coloured designs, like so many of these country houses in Bavaria. I wandered through the newly-built stadium, which will be floodlit for the night events at the Games, contemplated the ski runs, surveyed the Zugspitz towering above my head in a glory of green and white, and finally took my seat in the mountain railway train. It took over an hour to journey up the mountain in that train, and I shall not bore you with a description of the ascent—though there is one halt from which you look down upon a lake set in the heart of the mountains, one of the most beautiful things I have ever seen. Arrived within a thousand feet or so of the top, I changed into an extraordinary affair, something like a tram on an overhead wire, and by it was carried (not without quite unnecessary qualms) to the summit. I shudder to think just how far we would have fallen if the wire had given way; but it didn't, and never has, and thousands of people go up by it every year anyhow.

As it happened, the Zugspitz was veiled in cloud to-day, and I was disappointed in my hope of seeing Austria. But I have seen, instead, quite a lot of one of the most interesting parts of Germany: all the more interesting because it is within easy reach of this most charming of cities, Munich. I cannot completely understand wherein the charm of Munich lies. It is not a particularly beautiful city. Architecturally it has no very great interest, because most of the buildings seem to be copies of other buildings. But the shops are delightful; and the beer-houses; and the people. The people are very pleasant. They have not that blonde uniformity of colouring that you find all over North Germany, and neither have they the Prussian stiffness—though I must confess that I find this doctrine of Prussian stiffness somewhat difficult to believe, since I have seen very little of it myself. And the Muncheners enjoy life so thoroughly, as well they might. I have found no pleasanter people anywhere in this land, except possibly in Düsseldorf, where they were extremely decent to me, and gave me a rattling good time.

Luncheon on the Rhine

Perhaps, when you come, we shall do as I did, and journey from Munich to Frankfurt by air. It is surprising how cheaply one can travel by 'plane over here. I have not worked out the bill to decimal places, but I gather that it costs very little more to hop from place to place in a German aeroplane than to make the same trip first-class on the railway. And then, for the sake of variety, we shall take a stage of the homeward journey by steamer down the Rhine. The Rhine will surprise. Admittedly, a friend of mine was disappointed to discover that factories were at least as common along its banks as castled crags; but you will be delighted by its teeming life, by the incessant stream of vessels of every sort and condition that plies on the big river. You will see French boats, German boats, Dutch boats, Czech boats, Swiss boats—boats, in fact, from pretty well every nation of Continental Europe. I should not have been surprised to see a felucca or a sampan or even a familiar curragh. And, by virtue of that German talent for introducing comfort into everything, you will be able to enjoy an extremely good lunch on board, with service that challenges a good hotel's.

Perhaps, unless I receive a cable of protest, I shall write again.—Yours,

MARK.

FAITHLEGG HOUSE AUCTION

165 GUINEAS FOR CHIPPENDALE HALL TABLE

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

WATERFORD Friday.

To-day's attendance at the third day of the auction at Faithlegg House, Waterford, which is being conducted by Messrs. Battersby and Co., Ltd., Dublin, was the largest since the sale began. Among those who attended were Lady Anderson, Lady Olein Wyndham-Quin, Colonel and Mrs. Tyndal, and Mrs. W. Burroughs.

The principal interest centred in the furnishings of the grand entrance hall, inner hall and the salon, together with some 7,000 books. The highest figure of the sale was reached to-day, when a Chippendale hall table, with carved swags and frieze, about four feet by two feet, was knocked down after spirited bidding, which started at £25, at 165 guineas.

Other important prices were:—Clock in raised boule, Louis Seize period, 40 guineas; pair of Venetian Negro boy figures in carved wood and black and gilt, 5½ feet in height, 25 guineas; small Oriental lacquer cabinet of six drawers on a stand, 24 guineas; Chippendale-style jardinier stand, 14½ guineas; mahogany-cased hall clock (Mosley, of Waterford), 17 guineas; pair of metal vases, emblazoned with the Power family arms, 19 guineas; Sheridan-cased barometer, 6 guineas; small mahogany flat top card table, 9 guineas.

For the remainder of the day's sale interest was chiefly centred on many valuable items of Dresden, Oriental, Mason ironstone, Sevres, Capi di Monti and other china and books. Among the china prices noted were:—One large ironstone two-handled, bulb-shaped vase and cover, 20 guineas; pair two-handled vases in French china, painted with flowers and figures, 15 guineas; pair of art pottery vases and covers with dark brown designs, 14 guineas; pair of Capi di Monti tankards, with covers, 12 guineas; pair of Minton china two-part jardinieres, 12 guineas; pair of Dresden figures (flower-holders), 15 guineas; Famille rose bowl, 5 guineas.

During the afternoon the books were disposed of, and these included a number on the history of Waterford City and County. Ryland's "History of Waterford" fetched 4 guineas, and Smith's "History of Waterford" 10 guineas; Douai Bible, 4½ guineas; a bundle of pamphlets relating to Ireland, 3 guineas; portfolio of engravings, 4 guineas; "The Three Tours of Dr. Syntax" (illustrated), 5 guineas; Hogarth's works, 4 guineas; "Turkish Costume, Civil and Military" (with coloured illustrations), 3 guineas; small portfolio of Shakespeare engravings, 5 guineas.

To-morrow, the last day of the sale, will be devoted to the contents of the bedrooms.

MASONIC GIRLS' SCHOOL

The monthly meeting of the Board of Governors of the Masonic Girls' School will be held at the Schoolhouse, Ballsbridge, on Thursday morning next, the 4th February, at 9 o'clock. Breakfast will be served at 8.30 o'clock.

An echo of the disaster off Cape Guardafui on May 16th, 1932, when the Messageries Maritimes liner, Georges Philippar, was destroyed by fire and a number of the passengers were burned to death, was heard yesterday in the Court of Cassation, Paris, which quashed the charge against Captain Vicq, his second in command Captain Paoli, and three members of the crew.

BANKERS AND CUSTOMERS

"Banks in these islands pursue a conservative policy, the product of long experience, and have built up institutions of world repute, of proved financial security and stability, and enjoy the confidence of their customers and the public in general."

This passage concluded a lecture on "Bankers and Customers," given by Mr. C. R. R. Magrath, M.A., T.C.R.A., before the Insurance Institute of Ireland in Commercial Buildings, Dublin, last night.

Mr. Magrath gave a short historical survey of banking, and contrasted the banking methods of a century ago with modern practice. Present-day facilities, he was glad to say, were being increasingly utilised, and their business in connection with income-tax recovery, foreign exchange and trustee and executorship was developing rapidly.

Stressing the necessity for a bank of liquid assets and adequate reserves, the lecturer dealt in detail with the granting of accommodation and the consideration of security and period repayments, which had to be borne in mind, and with the reciprocal rights and duties of bankers and customers inter se.

LEGAL DEBATE

At a legal debate held by the Law Students' Debating Society at King's Inns on Thursday the decision in the case of Ryan v. Clarkin (1935 I.R. 1) was appealed against. Messrs. Jennings, Heavy and Crockett spoke for the appellants, and for the respondents appeared Messrs. O'Neill, McDevitt and Durcan (Auditor). Mr. K. Dixon, barrister-at-law, in a learned judgment, allowed the appeal with costs.

QUEEN'S INSTITUTE OF DISTRICT NURSING

Among those present at the Memorial Service in St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, last Tuesday were the following representatives of the Queen's Institute of District Nursing in Ireland:—The Hon. Mrs. Barry, President of the Council; members of the Committee and the Superintendent for Ireland.

Daily Programme Review

TO-DAY

DUBLIN: "A Newcomer's Night Out," by Liam Doyle, 8.30.

NORTHERN IRELAND: Orchestral Concert (Suggia, solo 'cello), 7.42.

B.B.C. NATIONAL: Variety, 8.30.

REGIONAL: The Boyd Neel String Orchestra, 8.30.

NORTH: Excerpts from "Red Riding Hood," from Leeds, 7.

SCOTTISH: Programme of Scots Songs, 8.30.

BRUSSELS: Russian Folk Music, 5.15.

RADIO ATHLONE to-night will broadcast a special programme in honour of St. Brigid. Commencing at 7.15 with a talk on "St. Brigid Abroad," by Desmond Driscoll, the Station Orchestra and vocal quartet will follow in a programme of appropriate music, conducted by Dr. Vincent O'Brien, and then Aodh de Blacam will speak on "Customs and Lore Associated with the Saint."

This week's Saturday variety entertainment consists of a station production of "A Newcomer's Night Out," written for broadcasting by Liam Doyle.

SCOTLAND V. WALES

Running Commentary on Rugby international match by Captain H. B. T. Wakelam, relayed from Edinburgh — Radio Athlone and B.B.C. National, 2.35.

In a short broadcast at 6.30 Denis Cox's fine voice will be heard in a group of songs which he will sing in Gaelic.

Madame Suggia, the eminent 'cellist, of whom it is said that her beauty of style and perfection of phrasing and intonation have never been surpassed, will be heard as soloist to-night in the Orchestral Concert from Northern Ireland. This is one of the occasions which Dublin listeners who cannot get Belfast clearly will deplore. In the portion for relay from the Wellington Hall, Suggia will play Boëllman's Symphonic Variation's for violoncello and orchestra, with the B.B.C. Northern Ireland Orchestra, conducted by E. Godfrey Brown. The relay commences with Dvorak's "Carnival" Overture and ends with Beethoven's Seventh Symphony.

An item of interest for those inclined to modern composers occurs in the programme of the Boyd Neel String Orchestra. It is that of Schönberg's latest work—a suite for strings, which will receive its first broadcast performance. Performed for the first time in New York under Otto Klemperer some weeks ago, it will be Boyd Neel's reading of the work that listeners will hear to-night, played by his own orchestra.

Pantomime excerpts still continue. Most of the large towns have now accounted for themselves, but still these popular relays continue. To-night, in excerpts from "Red Riding Hood," listeners will hear samples of Laidler's great Yorkshire pantomime from the Theatre Royal Leeds.

The hour of variety in the National programme this week features Marie Lloyd (jun.), the popular singer of her mother's songs. The "Air-do-Wells" repeat their breezy programme at 4.15 (Regional), which is their fourteenth edition. Brian Lawrence is with Fred Hartley and his Novelty Quintet again this week, singing with them in a programme of popular songs at 7.15, which also is a Regional transmission.

DISTINGUISHED vocal soloists and the Franciscan Church Choir will be heard in the portion of the programme for broadcasting to-morrow night, when a short relay will be taken from the Choral and Orchestral Concert (in aid of the Franciscan Church, Merchant's quay, Dublin), which is being given at the Gaiety Theatre. Maimie Dingle (soprano), the well-known Dublin operatic singer, will be heard in Meyerbeer's "Shadow Song"; Leslie Jones (baritone), another favourite with Dublin audiences, both by his broadcasting and his appearances with the Carl Rosa Opera Company, will be heard in an "Ave Maria" by Kahn. Then there is Mr. E. O'Donoghue, who will give Hardebeck's "Seán O Duibhi an Gleanna," and Mr. A. Doyle, whose contribution is "The Lord is my Light" (Allison). The choir will give Mozart's "Glorious is Thy Name" and Gounod's Agnus Dei.

This week the Sunday orchestral concert consists of a performance of Mahler's symphony, "The Song of the Earth," for tenor and contralto solos and orchestra, in which Astra Desmond and Walter Widdop are the vocalists. Except for the Ninth Symphony, "The Song of the Earth" was the last thing Gustav Mahler wrote, and it is generally acknowledged to be his masterpiece. The work is a setting of Chinese poems of the eighth century, freely embracing "The Drinking Song of Earth's Sorrows," "The Solitary One in Autumn," "Youth," "Beauty," "The Toper in Spring," and "Farewell." As guest conductor of the B.B.C. Orchestra, led by Arthur Catterall, Oskar Fried will direct the performance.

One feels bound to draw listeners' attention to "Liebestraum," a new potpourri of love songs, devised by Julius Buerger, produced and conducted by Stanford Robinson. The list of songs includes many of the loveliest, such as Liszt's second and third "Liebestraum," Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song," and "Wedding March," Brahms' "Standschen" (Serenade), and so on among the many to be sung or played, including music also of Strauss, Smetana, Lehar, etc. The list of singers is as attractive as the programme. They include Joan Berit (coloratura), Mary Jarred (contralto), Jan van der Gucht (tenor), and Arnold Matters (baritone). They will be supported by the B.B.C. Chorus, a Schrammel Quartet, and the B.B.C. Orchestra, with Leslie England as solo pianist. "Liebestraum" will be repeated in Tuesday's programmes.

The farewell to any Promenade Concert season is by no means farewell to Sir Henry Wood. One of the busiest of the great conductors, it is no surprise to see him announced from any part of the world, given the time to arrive there. To-morrow night Sir Henry will broadcast from Prague, when, as guest conductor, he will direct the famous Czech Philharmonic Orchestra. It is a splendid programme, just such a one in which, with this particular group of musicians to do his bidding, Sir Henry Wood might well be expected to be in his element.

The programme opens with Purcell's Suite for orchestra and organ, with Wiedermann as organist. This will be followed by the Symphony in E minor of Sibelius and Handel's "Berenice" Overture. Herman, as solo pianist, will then take part in Schumann's Concerto in A minor. Preceding the Toccata and Fugue in D minor (Bach-Klenovsky), it will be interesting to hear Sir Henry guiding a group of Czech musicians through Delius's "On Hearing the First Cuckoo in Spring," so essentially English.

BOOKS OF THE WEEK

The First Men in Ireland

Professor Martin's Scholarly Reconstruction

Prehistoric Man in Ireland. By Cecil P. Martin, M.B., M.Sc. London: Macmillan. 21/- net.

HOW was Ireland first peopled? Perhaps, in no country is the question of racial origin more often debated—as if it were an issue of present-day importance—than in Ireland. Naturally, when every petty writer must pronounce on so difficult a problem, an enormous deal of nonsense has been written on the matter, so that common, but honest, students are bewildered.

The theorising about early Ireland did not begin with the Anglo-Irish. A thousand years ago, working in the framework of universal history supplied by Orosius and Eusebius, the bardic authors constructed the Milesian fable, a national epic tale like Vergil's tale of Aeneas and Geoffrey of Monmouth's tale of Brutus; and poets lavished art on the elaboration of this racial myth. Later, the myth came to be held as serious history. There are folk living to-day who fondly trace their families' descent to the supposed sons of Milesius, who "came from a land beyond the wave," fate-led. It is true, however, that the bardic historians worked into their artificial tale olden traditions, of successive invasions, or takings—gabhála is their word—of primæval Ireland, and in these traditions lived some truth.

Science endeavoured to construct a more plausible tale than that of the poets, and we heard of the Bronze Age and the Iron Age, of brachycephalic and dolichocephalic invaders. A difference between the bardic history and the new ethnological history was this: that the poets worked on an abundance of traditional material, with a poetic licence that did not stickle for probability, while the men of science worked on exceedingly scant material, such as a few skulls and rusty swords, and sought to construct an equally comprehensive story without resort to pure guesswork. Some of us think that the bardic story, with its obvious touches of invention, was yet more plausible than the highly-elaborate structure of hypothesis that was erected on a trifle of craniographical knowledge.

A Racial Cul-de-Sac

To this vexed issue comes now a scholar of consummate scientific skill and cool judgment, Professor C. P. Martin, of Trinity College, Dublin, who collates in a large book all known evidence from the anatomy of old funereal remains. Here, at last, we are on solid ground. We have something more satisfying than second-hand information to deal with and, though we may lack Mr. Martin's own specialised learning, the tables of measurements, the photographs, the analyses, are set forth in such a way that we can test his arguments at every step. What, then, does this rare work contribute to the elucidation of the problem?

In an introductory chapter, Mr. Martin summarises the problem itself—tells how the remoteness of Ireland made it a blind alley for racial movements, so that it is filled with archaic blood even now. The waves that flowed across Europe stopped, however, at the Irish Channel when the Romans rested on their conquest in Britain, and the Anglo-Saxons seized that Celto-Roman province, but went no farther in bulk. Thus Ireland remains a museum of racial elements of the pre-Roman Western World. The question to be decided is in what proportion those elements existed before they blended into the historic Irish race.

Evidence

In the second and third chapters Mr. Martin explains the criteria by which science dates the funereal remains of early man, thus equipping common readers to follow his argument in the technical chapters that follow. In succession, the remains of Cavemen, Megalithic, Bronze Age, Iron Age men are discussed, with ample documentation; for every known ancient Irish skeleton has been measured for the purposes of this book. So, too, the men of the crannógs, the Norsemen, and others who have left skulls that cannot be classified, are considered, so that we feel that every scrap of accessible evidence is before us when, in a final chapter, a reconstruction is attempted—bold in its scope, but modest in its manner.

Let us note the main conclusions to which Mr. Martin is led; for we may take them as the most trustworthy data for knowledge of Irish origins as yet available anywhere: high praise for Mr. Martin's work, perhaps, but justified.

The Successive Strains

(i.) It is still doubtful whether the island was inhabited in Palæolithic times.

(ii.) In early Neolithic times a long-headed race of medium stature extended over both these islands. They made crude pottery and used flint.

(iii.) About the beginning of the Bronze Age another medium-sized people, with broader heads, arrived in Ireland. They were Iberians, and built the megalithic monuments; they cremated their dead.

(iv.) Early in the Bronze Age, when the megalithic usage had passed away, a tall, round-skulled race appeared. They did not exterminate or expel the original inhabitants. They buried their dead in the contracted position, with food vessels, but did not cremate them at first, although they adopted cremation towards the end of the Bronze Age. During the Bronze Age the Irish people were highly cultured, and built a large foreign trade on gold.

(v.) At the beginning of the Iron Age there was a new invasion. The new-comers were long-headed, but not of the same race as the former long-heads in Ireland. They buried their dead supine, with the feet to the east, but sometimes used cremation. In numbers they were few, but their iron weapons made them dominant. They used crannógs, which were as impregnable as Norman castles. Civilisation, for a time after their coming, was set back. They are held to have brought the Celtic language.

(vi.) "The present population of Ireland, therefore," Mr. Martin writes, "appears to be mainly derived from three sources—the river-bed type men of the raised beaches, the Iberian race of the Megalithic monuments, and the round-headed people of the middle Bronze Age. To these were added in later times some other strain from the Iron Age invaders, and very considerable Nordic elements from the Norse, Anglo-Saxon and Norman stocks. . . . At present it is not possible to separate the various elements. . . . nor does it seem reasonable to decide which section of the population is Irish and which is not."

A Contribution to History

Could a more lucid analysis be found in any former writer? We think not. Some readers will be struck by the comparison which Mr. Martin goes on to draw between the four-fold prehistoric occupation of Ireland, thus revealed by science, and the four invasions which the bardic writers describe.

We congratulate the author upon a solid contribution to Irish history, done with scholarly reserve and good taste.

Rogues and Robbers

A Bright Survey of Crime

Both Sides of the Dock. By Charles Kingston. London: Melrose. 16/- net.

MR. KINGSTON has added another very readable volume to the now large library of popular works on rogues and vagabonds. He writes in an agreeable manner, with the lightness of touch of the popular journalist or the author of best-selling thrillers. He has a most extensive knowledge of his subject, and ranges over two continents and many countries for his material. They are an astounding collection, these men and women whose achievements in fraud, forgery, deception, theft, blackmail and murder are recorded here. The claim is justified that if what Mr. Kingston has to tell was not amply confirmed by sober judicial evidence it would be incredible. The most outlandish feat in crook fiction is not more amazing than some of the actual deeds narrated here, and committed by real persons.

Misused Charm

Most of the people dealt with met with the punishment their crimes merited. But not all of them—some escaped their due reward, and some had, for one reason or another, the narrowest shaves; and, if some of them bore, as it were, the mark of the scoundrel on their countenance or character, others were persons of the most disarming charm. What could beat the effrontery of the ex-convict who succeeded in getting himself introduced by no less a person than a duke into an English Royal levée, only to meet at it the very judge who had originally sentenced him? He had a peer in the forger who for a time got ready enough sale for "letters" which he represented as having been written by some of the Apostles, Mary Magdalene and Alexander the Great. It was a very sporting gentleman who made a fortune out of an imaginary and grandiose greyhound stadium which never had any existence.

An Enterprising Irishman

Our sporting friend, indeed, was no Irishman, but our countrymen are not missing from Mr. Kingston's gallery. He has an exciting story to tell of the prepossessing son of an Irish M.P., with his chorus girl friend, by whom he was introduced to the delicate scion of an aristocratic house who, unfortunately for our Irishman, was so long a-dying that his grand scheme for getting rich through money-lenders and an insurance policy came to nothing. Murder, but not hanging, ended that episode, and our enterprising countryman was lucky in getting the chance to die in grim poverty at home. Mr. Kingston has something to say, too, of gentlemen named Maurice O'Hara and Patrick Brennan.

The Cunning Cleric

One of the most diabolically clever of these characters was an ex-clerical blackmailer. His mode of operation was simple and effective. From a quiet retreat in the country he posed as a dealer in rare books, but never advertised because his stock was as mythical as the sporting gentleman's dog track. But when a wealthy clergyman died our worthy "bookseller" sent to him at his home address a substantial bill for books of a character not altogether becoming the library of a respectable pastor. Invariably the innocent victims among his relatives or executors paid up the hush-money, if not with gladness, at least with relief. The blackmailer kept making quite a good income until one fine day a detective called on him and presented a warrant instead of a cheque on behalf of the representatives of a lately deceased client. "And the reason was that the writer of the obituary notice in The Times had unaccountably failed to mention that the wealthy Cumberland clergyman had retired from active clerical work twenty years before his death solely because he had lost his sight."

Two Sociologists

First Instalment of a New Series

Tylor. By R. R. Marett. Pareto. By Franz Borkenau. London: Chapman and Hall. 6/- net apiece.

THESE two volumes give an excellent start to the new series of studies of modern sociologists which Messrs. Chapman and Hall are publishing under the general editorship of of Professor Morris Ginsberg, now in the Chair of Sociology in the University of London, and Mr. Alexander Farquharson, the Secretary of the Institute of Sociology. The aim of the series is to present a systematic introduction to "the best of modern thinking about the social world in which we live and work," and "to reveal the real relationship between the various sociological theories and the practical problems of social life of which all thinking people to-day are conscious." In both volumes this aim has been kept in mind, and in both, although the treatment is as different as the material, it has a large measure of success.

Dr. Marett, who is Rector of Exeter College, Oxford, is in an exceptionally good position for writing on Tylor. He was a close personal friend of that pioneer in anthropology, and his relations with him at Oxford, and outside it, were constant and intimate. Dr. Marett, however, fears he stands too near Tylor to see him in the right perspective. "Great as was his science," he says, "the man himself was greater. To look as handsome as a Greek god, to be as gentle in heart as a good Christian should, and, withal, to have the hard, keen, penetrating intelligence of the naturalist of genius—this is to be gifted, indeed; or, as they would say in the Pacific, such a man has mana."

Quaker Evolution

Dr. Marett gives a satisfying account of Tylor's life and of his work in anthropology and archæology, and especially where his work reaches towards sociology. It will be found interesting even to readers who have little or no knowledge of the subject. Noting that Tylor came of Quaker stock, the author has some acute observations on the evolution of the Friends from what was curiously regarded as fanaticism, through nonconformity to liberalism. In their first period they were looked upon as schismatics, then as eccentrics; but in the last period they attained complete respectability, "so far as that doubtful compliment applies to free-thinking persons of any description."

Irish readers will find here some of Tylor's references to this country, especially in connection with the Irish claim to the discovery of America, and with what he thought were resemblances between Irish and Mexican anthropological material.

Notable Contradictions

Dr. Borkenan's volume on Pareto is a very different book from Dr. Marett's. It is more critical, and in several respects it will be found more difficult reading. The cause of that is partly the nature of the subject, and partly the manner of treatment and the style. Nevertheless, this monogram will repay study. Comparatively little of Vilfredo Pareto's work has appeared in English, and much less has been written about him in that language than about any other sociologist of his stature. It is inevitable, too, that a serious study of him should be critical; for both he and his work were notable for their contradictions. Of his personal life even Dr. Borkenan cannot discover much to say, and here he has to draw upon the work done in French by G. H. Bousquet five or six years ago.

Life of Revolt

Pareto's father was a Genoese nobleman, who belonged to Mazzini's party, and he had all the humanitarianism that distinguished the Italian patriot and his disciples. Not so Pareto. Against all this Pareto was in revolt all his life, whether or not because of personal conflict between father and son is not clear. But "as soon as humanitarianism is in question, all moderation disappears from his work. He never mentions it without adding some insulting or abusing term. In a decisive passage describing the antagonism between humanitarians and men of force, he contends that the latter accomplish a useful purpose in killing humanitarians like noxious beasts. . . . . This antagonism has dominated all his problems, all his research, and all his solutions. In the light of this insatiable hatred which breaks through on every occasion, his repeated assertions as to his objectivity, serenity and detachment can be discarded as a lack of psychological self-knowledge." There was something of the sociological anarchist in Pareto, and the influence of Nietzsche may be traced in him. On some points he would appear to have arrived at conclusions in psycho-analysis independently of Freud.

A Period of Storm

In politics Pareto had been a free-trader and strong anti-protectionist. Italy, however, seemed to get on fairly well in very despite of his principles. There followed a period of storm which cost him his position in Italy, and opened a university career for him in Switzerland. It was then he developed his special theories which he elaborated as "residues," "derivatives," and "elites." These, as Dr. Borkenan says, constitute the essential elements of his system, and their examination is the special merit of this volume.

ON THE TOUCHINESS OF AUTHORS

THE GROWING PRACTICE OF BACK ANSWERS

SOUND ADVICE FROM MR. HUGH WALPOLE

I CULL the following piece of advice from an article by Mr. Hugh Walpole. The article is entitled "Hints to Young Novelists," and may be found in "The Authors', Playwrights' and Composers' Handbook for 1936":—

> Do not allow yourself in any circumstances to imagine yourself a victim of persecution. If one especial reviewer steadily dislikes your work and says so, do not fancy that it is because he has heard you are a Mormon or because your wife cut him at a party. Do not imagine that the whole world of books is directed by monstrous favouritism. . . . Remember that writing is a personal affair, that there will always be those to whom your work is unsympathetic, however magnificent your work may be!

I quote this paragraph because it seems to me that one of the more depressing signs of the times is an increasing touchiness among authors. Formerly, if a novelist or a poet or a historian received a slating from a critic, he bottled up his grief. Conceivably, he felt that he had been ill-treated by an ignorant boor who was incapable of appreciating a work of art, and in all probability told his friends as much, while doing his best to present a brave face. But he did not rush into print about it. He maintained his dignity.

* * *

His attitude is different nowadays. I have watched with sorrow the new tendency among authors to answer back. Nobody could take it amiss when a historian, who has asserted that the Battle of Clontarf was fought in 1014, and is told by a reviewer that it actually occurred in 1016, ventures with all due modesty to reply. But it is a very different thing when the novelist, who has been recommended to give it up and try chicken-farming instead, flies into print with a violent assault on his reviewer's lack of education, experience, critical faculty and mental balance, not to mention his susceptibility to personal bias. The author who takes this line, in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, succeeds only in making an ass of himself. People who do not know him take no notice of anything but his bad temper, while his friends—such is friendship—laugh at him for his pains.

* * *

It is perhaps a little hard on the author that he should be expected to endure a slating in the public Press and to abstain from hitting back. But there you are. Actually the authors of books are so completely unreasonable that there is virtually nothing to be done with them. If I am a reviewer, and chance to dislike a book which has been sent to me for notice, how am I to handle it? There are three choices. I can swallow my conscience and praise the book to the skies—it must be to the skies, because the average author understands superlatives or nothing, and merely average praise arouses the suspicion that one doesn't really like the book. Alternatively, I can lambaste him, in which case he is as likely as not to write wild letters about it, and destroy whatever chance he has of being taken seriously. Again, I can forbear to review his book; and then he has a worse grievance than ever.

* * *

Once upon a time a novelist came to me. "You eviscerated my last book—I think most unfairly," said he. "My new one will be coming along in another ten days. Don't you think you could do something better about it?" He was clearly not asking for a puff. When I asked his meaning, he said: "Could you not manage a little constructive criticism? If you don't like the book, say where, in your opinion, it goes wrong. Not, of course, that I have any great respect for your judgment." I did not like the book. I disliked it principally because the grammatical errors that occurred at least twice on every page prevented me from reading it with any comfort; and I said so, documenting my review with the utmost care, and providing the correct alternative for every solecism. That was constructive criticism with a vengeance; but to this day my one-time friend poisons my reputation wherever he goes.

* * *

And if anyone dares to tell me that novelists alone are capable of judging the work of other novelists, my retort is a cliché: Si monumentum requiris, circumspice!

The Elucidation of India

An Admirable New History

A History of India from the Earliest Times to the Present Day. By Sir George Dunbar, Baronet. London: Ivor Nicholson and Watson. 12/6 net.

HERE is a fine work of over 600 pages, a well-ordered, agreeably-written account of India that begins with that great civilisation of 3,000 B.C., which excavations at Mohenjo Daro and Harappa—as we told in a review last year—have brought to light. The book comes down to the present day, and closes with a summary of the factors that have shaped that mighty Empire:—

> Three influences have shaped the history of India. Two came by invasion through the north-west passes, the third came over the sea.
>
> The Indo-Aryan descent upon the country gave India her oldest and most powerful culture, the religion of Brahmanism and the concentration of caste, her deep philosophy and the idealism of Hindu art.
>
> The Muhammedan conquests brought the doctrine of universal brotherhood in religion and the civilisation of Islam to become an established institution in the country; but also to create the communal strife which has existed with varying intensity for nine hundred years.
>
> The third great influence, the most important politically in India to-day, is the westernisation of the educated classes which came with the rise of British supremacy and the eventual establishment of the stability of order throughout the country . . . . .

Here, we may say, is the whole history of India in a generalisation. However, Sir George Dunbar's gifts are for the detailed manner of writing, too, and his book will rank as, perhaps, the best reference work on Indian history for many a long day. If we turn to what he has to say on the Portuguese discovery and the foundation of Goa—that still flourishing Portuguese possession—we find a sound, brief account that omits no salient fact. If we come down to present problems, we find him equally good. What is the supreme Indian problem?—The defence of the North-West Frontier.

The Russian Menace

Beyond the border dwell war-like tribes possessed of at least a quarter of a million rifles. Defence forces now number 183,000 of all arms, numerically inferior to the possible enemy, but strengthened by superiority of weapons, especially the air arm. Meanwhile, the "Indianisation" of the army is proceeding. This is a political necessity, and doubtless highly desirable; but Indians cannot supply men for supreme command for lack of experience, and it is difficult to see how Indianisation and efficiency can advance together. Eastward move the forces of world unrest from Russia. Will they strike an India unfit to resist successfully?

A merit of the book is its ample bibliography and the chronology at the end of every chapter. The illustrations and maps are excellent.

Translation as an Art

Modern Translation. By E. Stuart Bates. The Oxford University Press. (London: Milford.) 6/- net.

EVERY day two translated works issue from the press in Spain, Italy, Germany and France, and one in England. The reading public of Europe is several hundred millions, although, of course, most of these folk read only newspapers. It is clear that translation plays an immense part in the world's culture. Hence a sprightly, scholarly essay on translation as an art has importance as well as interest.

Mr. Stuart Bates has not much that is novel to say, but he goes over the old principles with much good taste, solid information, and pleasing examples. He admires Miss Waddell's work with the mediæval Latin lyrics: "Miss Waddell had to be waited for, and if she had not been born in due time there is no knowing when the opportunity would have been taken, if ever." It is surprising, by the way, that he does not mention John Heron Lepper, the Ulster translator of Verlaine and other French authors, who surely fulfils better than most of the translators whom he names the ideal demand.

Of translators from the Irish, Mr. Bates especially praised Standish Hayes O'Grady—we are glad to see that true genius recognised—and Frank O'Connor, Miss Eleanor Hull, and Dr. Robin Flower; but no others, ignoring the names of the highest distinction.

The Shadow Protector

Life of Richard Cromwell

Richard Cromwell, Protector of England. By Robert W. Ramsay. London: Longmans. 10/6 net.

RICHARD CROMWELL was never fitted for the heavy burden of office as Protector of England, and of the conquered neighbouring countries. That much is plain enough to the most casual student of history. He was not of the stuff of which rulers were made in his time. He was in most respects a "good type" English gentleman, and neither his temperament nor his inclinations would ever have turned him into anything else. In these later times he might fill decently the rôle of President of a constitutional and democratic republic, or nominal leader of a moderate political party. But to rule in the England his father, Oliver, had made was not his destiny. His brother, Henry, might have had the requisite qualities, or one of Oliver's generals. Truth to tell, Richard was well aware of all this, and he had no ambition to be other than he was. His declaration that he would have no blood spilled to keep him in power is evidence enough on these matters.

A Peaceful Man

Every point in this argument is driven well home in Mr. Ramsey's careful study. Mr. Ramsey is an authority on the Cromwells, and if this volume has less life and drama than others of his writing the fault is not his, but lies in the weakness of his subject. Richard was happiest in his years of exile as plain Mr. Clarke, and he would have been happier still if circumstance had permitted him to live his whole life in peace at home, without the cares of office. He wanted to be a simple, amiable, country gentleman, respected by his friends and neighbours as Mr. Richard Cromwell. It was not to be, however, and Mr. Ramsey, with scrupulous fairness, explains why.

Original Letters

Mr. Ramsey has made use of all the available material. How small a figure Richard cuts in history is seen in the fact that the author's list of authorities fills little more than a page and a half. Fortunately, these include original letters of Richard's and of others, and the Pengelly correspondence and accounts. From these Mr. Ramsey has been able not only to write Richard's biography, but also to give a very human picture of a not unlikeable personality; his worries and his thoughts, and his relations with his family and his friends. But for these it would scarcely have been worth while to write a biographical study of such length. With them, however, this volume gives all that is known, or need be known, about the shadow that for a moment filled the place of the "man of iron," who was Oliver Cromwell. The thought is irrelevant, but will history repeat itself in the succession to Mussolini, Hitler or Stalin?

An interesting by-product of Mr. Ramsey's work is information relating to Richard's son, Oliver. A real Cromwell, this, who was "anxious to play a part in the revolution of 1688, and offered to raise a regiment of horse for service in Ireland, but the offer was declined by King William." He was "a restless spirit, and caused his father some anxiety," and so, perhaps, the Irish Jacobites had some little for which to be thankful to William.

New Novels

Three of the Three Million. By Leonard Frank. Bodley Head. 7/6 net.

Othersmith. By George Woden. Hutchinson. 7/6 net.

Judith. By Clarissa Fairchild Cushman. Methuen. 7/6 net.

THE style of Herr Leonard Frank's work reflects the influence of the expressionist school, and in particular that of Toller. Readers will guess from the title that he is writing of the unemployed, and what he has done is to draw clearly in the foreground three nameless victims, behind whom stand massed the millions, indistinguishable from the shadows of their representatives. Yet though his clerk, his tailor and his factory-hand are in this sense abstractions, they are carefully drawn and individualised, and we are able to follow the course of their adventures without at any time finding them merged into the shadowy background.

These three men desert their home town and its inadequate dole in the hope of finding some mitigation of their soul's despair in the larger world beyond. By some ironic and implausible chance they obtain £100, and with it ship to South America. One's first instinct is one of disapproval at so bold and improbable invention on the part of the author, but its improbability sinks into insignificance when one realises its purpose in the story. This wild fairy tale, coming in the middle of a story of grim, stark realism, barren of all trappings of romance or sentiment, is a strength rather than a weakness, and accentuates the brooding terror of the theme.

* * * * *

"Othersmith" is a man of middle age, looking back on his dead dreams, feeling oppressed by his sense of failure, and aware that soon old age will put a final stop to everything but memory. We are shown now reality has fallen short of his dreams, and as now one and now another dream parades before him we are plunged back into the past, so that we may learn what happened then, and how far Mr. Othersmith is responsible for the road he took, and to what extent he was a victim of circumstances. The same method is employed to depict the character of his wife and even of his family, and somehow one never becomes quite absorbed in the characters themselves.

* * * * *

When a competent American writer sets about telling a simple story without any deep psychological interpretation, we often get a novel with a fresh appeal, such as few authors on this side of the Atlantic can provide. Such a novel is "Judith," and it will be found pleasant, if sometimes poignant, reading. The scene is in the Southern States, where some little feeling still persists against the "damnyankees" of the North. Judith is a tomboyish Southern young lady, who escapes by marriage to the young Northern architect, Hilary, from the open life of the country to the stuffier air of New York and Brooklyn. City and city folk are not quite so tolerable as she had imagined, and after little misunderstandings she runs away to the country again, and makes a literary reputation by writing on gardening. In the end wife and husband come happily together again. The character of Judith is well drawn, as is that of a benevolent and aged publisher of a type now rare.

The Ventriloquist. By E. Belasyse. Davies. 7/6 net.

Michael and his Angels. By Lewis Gibbs. Dent. 7/6 net.

Anyone who is contemplating either bigamy or murder must read "The Ventriloquist." It is a very simple story of a music hall artist, who finds his landlady's daughter more fascinating than his wife. From the first few pages of the story it is apparent that a murder is going to be committed, but the author insists upon working up steadily to the moment when it takes place. So cleverly is this done, however, that the reader, instead of being tempted to skip chapters and get along to the gory deed, is led, fascinated, to the finish. The accidental discovery of the crime, however, is below the standard of the rest of the work. The subsequent flight from justice of the murderer and his new bride is very neatly described, and, if the reader scarcely sympathises with the ventriloquist, one follows his efforts to elude justice with understanding.

* * * * *

Mr. Lewis Gibbs gives us here a straightforward chronological account of the first thirty years of a young man's life, beginning with the blue ribbons which trimmed his cot, and ending, after many vicissitudes, with his discovery of true love.

Michael is the son of an insignificant curate. His education was scrappy, and, when his father died sixteen years after Michael's birth, it came to an abrupt end. His mother marries again, and they become estranged. Michael drifts round London, miserable and alone, finds jobs of sorts, and is just settling down to make friends and get some good out of life when war breaks out. He has the usual experiences of a sensitive young man while at the war, but he returns whole and well. There is none to rejoice at his home-coming, but after more drifting he finds happiness and security. Mr. Lewis Gibbs's very pleasant manner of writing redeems this novel from mediocrity.

"Conversations" with the Dead

Through a Stranger's Hands: New Evidence of Survival. Compiled by Nea Walker. London: Hutchinson. 16/- net.

THIS volume, which has a foreword by Sir Oliver Lodge, purports to be "a full account and record of communications received through a medium, not by the bereaved persons themselves, but by Sir Oliver Lodge's secretary in psychical research, Miss Nea Walker, who has carefully chosen cases of which she had no knowledge available for mind reading."

The medium, as a matter of fact, did not know anything about the personalities with whom it was sought to get in touch, and the technique adopted seems to leave no loophole for the building up of a fictitious personality, according to expectation, while the possibility of leakage of information, by telepathy or otherwise, appears equally remote.

The results are given with a wealth of detail that is rather staggering, and at the end of each "case" there is a careful analysis of the results obtained. Persons in a position to check the results through their knowledge (not shared by Miss Walker or the medium) of the deceased individuals in life have gone through the seemingly verbatim reports of the "conversations" and have stated where the facts were correct, incorrect, too vaguely given, or not known to them. They have vouched for the correctness of the "spirit" communications in a surprisingly large number of instances—in fact, in the majority.

The outstanding features of this remarkable book are the unsparing honesty of Miss Walker, and the detached, scientific manner in which the inquiries were conducted. It is a book that will create a distinct "sensation" in spiritualistic circles.

The Naval Problem

A certain stage of progress was reached yesterday at the Naval Conference between Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States. After many discussions, it has been decided to help forward the idea of naval limitation by a yearly exchange of information on building programmes between the four Powers concerned. This frankness, no doubt, will be an improvement on the old system by which every nation watched its neighbour with suspicion, and built its battleships, so to speak, in the dark. The "naval race" before the outbreak of the Great War was partly due to lack of knowledge; for the building programmes of Great Britain and Germany were founded mainly on speculation, and the aim of each country was to outdo the other—since neither was able to make more than a guess at the real position of its opponent. To abolish this situation is to gain something, but not very much, and, in any case, it is hard to take the Naval Conference very seriously since Japan withdrew from its discussions. However admirable may be the plans of the four contracting Powers, they are not self-contained. The naval problem cannot be solved by an agreement between Great Britain, France, Italy and the United States, because it does not depend on them alone. Japan, the fifth great naval Power, must rule their programmes to a certain extent. During the past generation she has proved her strength—she has defeated Russia, she has covered China with her armies, and she has made it perfectly clear that she intends to be mistress of the Pacific. Much as her policy may be disliked, Japan must be recognised as one of the most virile nations on earth, and, therefore, one of the most potentially dangerous. It is in naval affairs, especially, that she cannot be left out of account; and the Naval Conference has lost most of its meaning since her withdrawal.

The story of Japan's resignation from the Conference can be described either as a story of cross-purposes or a story of overweening ambition, according to the point of view. The Washington and London Naval Treaties had laid down a certain quota for naval construction, as between Great Britain, the United States and Japan, by which the latter country would be allowed to build up to three-fifths of the total tonnage of the two former countries. These treaties were due for revision at the end of last year, and, as Japan in the meantime had denounced them, it remained for the nations concerned to find a new basis for discussion. The Conference opened on December 9th, and from the first it was obvious that there was certain to be an absolute divergence of views. Briefly, Japan's demand was for "equal armament," while Great Britain, supported by the other Powers, wished for "equal security." The latter point of view will seem the more reasonable to any impartial mind. Great Britain has to protect, not only her own coastline, but her Dominions, and they are scattered over the whole face of the world. In time of war she must be prepared to defend any one of them against possible attacks, and she must also be in a position to guard the lines of communication between them. Thus, the idea that the British Navy should be larger than any other navy is not a product of "imperialism," but of absolute necessity, and Great Britain is faced with a far greater problem than that which faces any other naval Power. America, indeed, can claim special consideration also, because of her enormously long coastline, but Japan's defences include only her own shores and her new possessions in Manchuria. Unless her designs are definitely offensive, she has no need for a fleet so large as that of Great Britain or the United States, but she has insisted on the right to it, and has left the Conference because the other Powers would not accept her claim.

Naval disarmament, or even naval limitation, can be no more than a pious hope so long as Japan insists on going her own way. As we pointed out a few days ago, her attitude must govern the attitude of every other nation, and it is hard to see how another "naval race" can be avoided. If Japan builds warships beyond the limits needed for defence, America must follow suit; for she cannot allow the control of the Pacific to pass into Japanese hands. If America builds, Great Britain will keep pace with her, and Germany—by virtue of last year's agreement—will be entitled to build in proportion. France, always on the watch, will strengthen her own fleet against Germany, and Italy, whose naval programme is based on parity with France, will do likewise. Just as Germany set the pace for naval construction before the War, so Japan is beginning to set the pace now, and nobody seems either to know or to care what the end may be. Yet it is obvious that this unlimited competition is almost bound to lead to disaster, and that all the agreements between the European Powers will be worth little if they disregard Asia. Japan is not likely to be coaxed back to the Naval Conference, any more than she is likely to be coaxed back into the League of Nations. She has set her feet upon the path of "expansion," and she feels herself far enough removed from Europe to disregard the European point of view. Indeed, she has some excuse for her attitude. The League of Nations, which has been commendably firm over Abyssinia, left Northern China to its fate without a qualm, and Japan has been encouraged to think that she can do almost anything without the risk of interference. Great Britain and America have it in their power to curb Japanese naval activity, and it may not be long before they decide to use that power by strengthening their own fleets in the Pacific.

Unemployment

To the student of economics who revels in a really baffling problem we recommend a study of actual conditions in the Irish Free State. Speaking at a public dinner in Dublin during the week the Minister for Industry and Commerce painted a rosy picture of our position, and to the casual observer the Saorstát must appear to be one of the most prosperous countries in Europe. There seems to be no lack of money in Dublin. Outside London we doubt if there is any city on this side of the Atlantic in which there is a greater expenditure per capita on amusements. Dublin has a large number of enormous cinema theatres, every one of which is virtually packed on every night of the week—including Sunday; and in comparison with other cities cinema seats in Dublin are anything but cheap. Mr. Lemass told his audience on Wednesday night that the number of private motor cars in the Free State had grown substantially of recent years, and it is a notorious fact that a motor car costs considerably more in the Saorstát than it costs nywhere else. One could multiply instances of this kind to indicate that there is no shortage of money in the Free State, and that, in fact, the country is better off to-day than ever it was. Ministers, indeed, are inclined to dwell on evidences of our well-being, and, not unnaturally, to take the credit to themselves for this remarkable condition of affairs; but there are occasions on which the sudden intrusion of a cold fact comes as an unwelcome douche to damp enthusiasm. We print to-day, for example, an official statement of the unemployment figures in the Free State, showing that at the moment there are no fewer than 144,764 persons on the unemployment register. This figure constitutes a record for the Saorstát We have no doubt that official apologists will explain it away to their own entire satisfaction; yet it is difficult to reconcile the existence of such a huge army of workless citizens with the somewhat bombastic utterances of Government spokesmen. We know that emigration has been stopped, and that the population is increasing in consequence by some 30,000 a year. We also know that the number of men and women in jobs probably is larger to-day than ever it was previously; but the ugly fact remains that nearly 145,000 citizens of the Saorstát are without work. Few, if any, of them are starving, because the Free State has the most lavish system of doles and unemployment benefit in Europe, but the mere fact that they are prevented from the earning of their daily bread must give the most thoughtless citizen pause. Ministers and their friends will tell us that the lack of jobs in this country is part and parcel of the economic depression which has been affecting the whole civilised world, and to some extent they will be right. What they will not tell us, however, is the one thing that matters—namely, that the entire economic situation in this country is bedevilled by the economic war with Great Britain. Two years ago the Parliamentary Secretary to the President announced with pride that Great Britain was "nearly beaten." What does he think of the situation to-day? So long as this ridiculous struggle continues unemployment in the Saorstát will be bound to increase, particularly in the rural areas, and we wish that Mr. Norton, who refused last night to comment on the latest figures, would make that fact clear to the Government. Inasmuch as the Labour Party is a supporter of the economic war, it is largely, if not mainly, responsible for the volume of unemployment in the country. Does it share Mr. Little's view that Great Britain is "nearly beaten"? If it does not share that view, what does it propose to do about the plight of the unemployed?

Drinking Women

In the parish magazine the rector of a sleepy Hampshire village penned a last message to his flock. "The cocktail or sherry woman is a danger in the place," said the rector gently in his parting. "The old tea parties were dangerous meeting places for scandal, but the new pastime makes a woman far more dangerous, because when she has got some alcohol in her body she gets beyond herself and talks foolishly." The rector was resigning on doctor's orders. From the evidence to hand it seems that the womanhood of this particular village had been getting alcohol into their bodies, then getting miles beyond themselves, and finally talking foolishly about the rector. "If I have made myself desperately unpopular," said the unhappy man in an earlier passage, "I care not one atom about that, but if I have smashed forever the unfair, untrue and scandalous gossip about the priest in this parish for the future, then my sojourn here has really been worth while." It is just about as bad as can be; but the rector, by his own ordeal, has exposed an evil that must have been blossoming like the stinkwort since the War, unsmelled—as it were—by the world Students of humanity have detected in the last ten years a growing bitterness in doe parties, a certain unwholesome refinement of cruelty that amounts almost to a malevolent genius. They put it down to woman's new-found independence and to her new-found confidence in the value of her own opinions. The traditional tea parties were continued, the hallowed ceremony of—"You'll never believe this of her, my dear"—was as strong as ever. It was only the results that were different. Libel actions, divorce cases, and battery were the achievements of these post-War at-homes; where in earlier times one or two people merely were cast out into the snow. If only we had known, however, that flasks and a siphon were being passed round behind the closed doors of the drawingroom, in place of a nice dish of China and a rock-bun, the reason for all this "unfair, untrue and scandalous gossip" might have been more plain.

La Vie Chere

That mysterious symbol, the "cost of living index figure," seems to become more mysterious as time goes on. At the annual meeting of the Dublin Chamber of Commerce a few days ago Alderman Hubbard Clark pointed out that the purchasing price of money actually is greater now in the Free State than it was before Mr. de Valera first took office; for since 1930 the index figure has sunk from 168 to 162. Is it, then, merely imagination which leads the ordinary citizen to think that prices have moved upwards during the past five years? When compared with the cost of living in the United Kingdom, there is no doubt that the Free State figure is very high—almost everything, from motor cars to foodstuffs, costs far more in Dublin than in London or Belfast. Even if that comparison is not made, prices definitely seem to be rising in the Free State, and all the complaints which are made cannot be due to imagination. "Six weeks ago," wrote an applicant for relief to the Dublin Board of Assistance, "a loaf of bread cost 3d., and now it is 3½d.; tea was 1s. 4d., and now is 1s. 6d.; sugar was 3d., and now is 3½d." There have been several other complaints of this nature, especially from poor people for whom every penny counts; and the whole matter is to be considered at Monday's meeting of the Dublin Corporation. It would be somewhat strange, indeed, if prices were not rising; for the Government's tariff policy encourages an increase in the cost of living. Small Irish factories, catering only for a population of three millions, cannot always turn out their goods so cheaply as the great industrial firms in England; and it was to be expected that the encouragement of industry in this country would lead to higher prices, especially at first. Yet, as Senator O'Farrell pointed out on Thursday night, the State's duty is to help not only the producer, but the consumer; and, at the moment, the latter is in some danger of being forgotten.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT MAJORITY

Premier Cites British Empire as Example

HIS SINGLE MOTIVE— THE NATIONAL INTEREST

THE French Government, led by M. Sarraut, secured its first victory in the Chamber last night, when it obtained a majority of 196 votes. Official figures were: 361 votes for the Government to 165 against.

There were two motions before the House:

(1) A Right Opposition motion, denouncing the Government as a camouflaged Popular Front Ministry; and

(2) A Radical Left Centre motion, expressing confidence in the Government.

The Government demanded a vote on point two, making it a question of confidence. The vote was nominally on the point of procedure, but really decisive.

The British Empire was cited as an example to France by the new Prime Minister, M. Sarraut, during the debate. "When the higher interest of the Empire is at stake, or when the Empire is knit in great mourning, all party strife ceases," he declared.

SUPPORT FROM SOCIALISTS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Friday.

In accepting the Premiership he had been actuated by a single motive, said M. Sarraut. It was national interest. Yet when he was trying to form a Cabinet he had been "torpedoed to port and torpedoed to starboard."

M. Sarraut was replying to interpellators. His speech added little to the generalities of the Ministerial declaration, but the Chamber spent a bright hour and a half listening to the Prime Minister handing out bouquets to all parties. So abundantly did he hand them out that every sentence elicited cheers from the Right and jeers from the Left, or vice versa.

AFFECTION FOR ITALY

Regarding foreign policy, the Prime Minister reiterated his anxiety to see the Italo-Ethiopian war end as soon as possible, adding: "I have a deep affection for the Italian people."

"I have always endeavoured to understand that which is admissable in Italy's sentiments. I regret in this respect certain errors of diplomacy which has sometimes refused to recognise the right of some to live."

M. Sarraut's main task was to answer personal attacks on members of his Cabinet. He admitted that the combination was mixed, but declared that his children were good children. He hoped that they could agree. If they did not, their father would be there to decide for them.

He corrected an insinuation that General Maurin, the Minister of War, was attached to a great armament firm. General Maurin, he said, had resigned his company directorships on entering the Government.

After the Prime Minister's speech the sitting was suspended for a quarter of an hour.

The Socialist leader, M. Leon Blum, set the Government a short examination paper, the answers to which were to determine the attitude of the Socialists towards the Government. His questions were:—

Was the Government's adherence to the League Covenant total?

Would the Government enforce a law regulating the activities of the League?

Would broadcasting be a Government monopoly, or would it be placed at the disposal of all parties during the electoral campaign?

BELIEF IN LEAGUE

M. Blum declared that the Sarraut Government had one advantage in Socialist eyes—it replaced that of M. Laval.

After M. Sarraut had answered all the Socialist leader's questions in the affirmative the sitting was suspended for half an hour.

In connection with the League, M. Sarraut declared: "My Government believes in the absolute necessity of the League, because it believes in the necessity of collective security."

During the interval the Socialists decided to vote for the Government, which was thus assured of a very large majority.

Later the Communists decided to abstain from voting. It was the first time in the history of the party that they had not voted against the Government.

MAY WEATHER ELECTIONS

The Government's majority to-night is larger than any M. Laval ever had. It is, therefore, considered that, with careful steering among pre-electoral rocks, the new Cabinet may weather through to the elections.

Though immediately it was known that the Socialists were giving their support the result was never in doubt, few thought that the majority would be as massive. This was largely due to the number of abstentions among members of the Centre.

THE FOUR-POWER CONFERENCE

AN EXCHANGE OF INFORMATION

The Four-Power Naval Conference reached its first tangible decision at a meeting of the First Committee yesterday, when it unanimously adopted the report prepared by experts for the yearly exchange of information concerning shipbuilding programmes.

The new scheme represents a considerable extension of existing provisions under the Washington and London Naval Treaties. The following communiqué was issued after the meetings of the First Committee.

"The Committee to-day examined and adopted a report submitted by the Technical Sub-Committee on the question of advance notification and exchange information.

"In accordance with the intentions expressed at its previous meeting the Committee then decided to set up a new technical sub-committee to perpare a report on the definitions of the various categories of vessels, the standard displacement of all naval combatant vessels, the age limits to be applied to such vessels, and the qualitative limitations to be included in the treaty.

"It was agreed that the Sub-Committee should meet on Monday, February 3rd, at 3.30."

The scheme adopted by the Conference, it is understood, provides for the confidential exchange between all high contracting parties of information regarding their annual programmes of construction.

This information is to be exchanged within the first four months of the calendar year.

The agreement provides that no Power shall lay the keel of any ships until four months after this preliminary notification has been made, and that full characteristics of the design of each ship shall be furnished four months before the date of laying the keel.

This represents a considerable extension of existing treaty provisions, which stipulate that the full characteristics of design shall be supplied after the vessel has been completed.

Provision is also made for notifying important alterations made during the period of construction or subsequently after the ship is complete. This is an important provision to meet the possibility of the introduction of new types of combatant ships, and so will be a safeguard against the qualitative competition in building.

MEMEL NAZIS' APPEAL

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

KOVNO, Friday.

The Memel Nazis who were sentenced with their leader, Dr. Neumann, on a charge of plotting to seize Memel and hand it over to Germany, have appealed to the President for clemency in connection with the Lithuanian Independence Day on February 16th. The appeal is considered to be an important step towards improvement of relations between Germany and Lithuania.

NO COMMENT AT ELLIS ISLAND

GERMAN DEPORTEE'S ALLEGATIONS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Friday.

Immigration officials at Ellis Island to-day declined to make any comment on the allegations of Dr. George Bresin, the political refugee deportee, who arrived at Plymouth yesterday aboard the U.S. liner President Roosevelt on his way to Germany.

Dr. Bresin, who claims to have discovered important Nazi secrets affecting British interests in Ethiopia while engaged in anti-Nazi propaganda in the United States, alleged that he was taken off the liner American Trader, in which he had booked a passage to England, detained at Ellis Island, and later put aboard the President Roosevelt in custody.

Reuter's correspondent was officially informed at Ellis Island that a Dr. George Bresin, a German citizen, was deported to Germany on January 22nd aboard the President Roosevelt.

"Dr. Bresin resided in the United States for less than five years," the immigration officials added. They refused to give any further details.

The records of the Labour Department in Washington show that Dr. George Bresin was born in France, but was a German citizen. He was admitted to the United States on November 29, 1934, on a five months' visitors' permit, which was later extended to September 1, 1935. He overstayed this permit, and was notified that he must leave the country by November 29, 1935.

When he attempted to do this the steamship companies refused him a passage, as his German passport had expired.

Dr. Bresin then appeared, bearing a passport issued by himself, in which he had styled himself as "Governor pro tem of the Provisional Government of the Rhine Republic." This the steamship company's officials refused to recognise, and the immigration authorities ordered his deportation. The order permitted him to leave the country voluntarily at his own expense. This he did not do, so he was finally deported.

THE HAUPTMANN CASE

"NO NEW EVIDENCE"

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

TRENTON, Friday.

"They do not contain a fragment of new evidence. The position remains unchanged." This was the comment made here to-day by Mr. Wilentz, Chief Prosecutor in the Hauptmann trial, on the statements contained in the letter addressed by Governor Hoffman yesterday to the New Jersey Chief of Police, Colonel Schwartzkop, expressing the opinion that the Lindbergh baby crime was not the act of one person alone.

Meanwhile Colonel Schwartzkop has replied to Governor Hoffman assuring him of his "complete and continuous co-operation."

KING GEORGE'S HORSES

ANNOUNCEMENT BY LORD DERBY

TO LEASE ROYAL STABLES

LORD DERBY is leasing King George's horses until the end of the racing year. The King, however, has every intention of continuing the Royal connection with the Turf.

THE STATEMENT

Lord Derby issued the following statement yesterday:—

"His Majesty the King was graciously pleased to give me an interview this morning at which he confirmed an arrangement, previously come to between General Tomkinson and myself, whereby I lease the late King's horses now in the possession of His Majesty.

"The procedure that will be adopted is precisely the same as that which I adopted when I leased his late Majesty's horses when he succeeded King Edward. They will remain at Egerton Lodge under Jarvis, and they will be managed by Brigadier-General Tomkinson. They will be kept entirely apart from my stable and will run quite separately.

"Perryman will be the jockey for Stanley House and for the leased horses, and in any case of the leased horses where Perryman cannot ride the weight I intend to ask Fox to ride, though there will be no retainer on him and, therefore, he would be perfectly free to accept any other engagement.

"This arrangement will continue till the end of the racing year.

KING AND RACING

"His Majesty was good enough at the end of the interview to give me permission to state that he has every intention of continuing the Royal connection with the Turf, both as regards his racing stable and as regards the stud. Both will be subject to such alterations as His Majesty may, after consideration, find necessary and advisable, but the connection which has lasted now through so many generations in the Royal Family will be effectively maintained."

BRITISH SEAPLANE CRASHES

RESCUE OF OCCUPANTS

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

GIBRALTAR, Friday.

The occupants of a British naval seaplane attached to H.M.S. Nelson were rescued in dramatic circumstances this morning, when their machine crashed into the sea.

The 'plane, which, with other machines, was carrying out air exercises, was seen to be flying under difficulties. When it eventually came down inside the harbour waiting speedboats rushed to the rescue. The occupants were saved, suffering from only slight injuries and given first aid aboard Nelson.

In the meantime the seaplane had submerged, but the dockyard tug managed to fasten a cable to it, and was eventually successful in re-floating the machine.

KILLED IN MILL

HOUSE FELL PREVIOUS NIGHT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BALLYBAY, Friday.

Mr. Jack Nesbitt (26), Edenferken, Ballybay, Co. Monaghan, was killed this afternoon in his corn mill, where he was working alone. It appears that he got caught in the water wheel which drives the machinery. Not having come home for dinner his brothers called at the mill, where they found his dead body jammed in the wheel.

A house on an out-farm belonging to the deceased man fell last night and killed three valuable cattle.

TRAFFIC THROUGH CORRIDOR

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Friday.

The Polish Minister of Communications has notified the German railway company that the traffic between Germany and East Prussia and Danzig through the Polish corridor will have to be restricted, beginning on February 7th, owing to "difficulties which have arisen over the transfer of sums owed by the German railways to Poland for this traffic," according to a communiqué issued by the German News Agency to-night. Negotiations are under way to settle the matter.

POPE HAS SLIGHT COLD

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

VATICAN CITY, Friday.

TRAIN PLUNGES OVER BRIDGE

THREE DEAD IN U.S. ACCIDENT

TELEPHONE GIRL'S PRESENCE OF MIND

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SUNBURY, Friday.

THREE persons were killed and thirty-one injured in a terrible train smash near Sunbury, Pennsylvania, early this morning.

The Pennsylvania-New York express was tearing over the bridge across the Susquehanna river when the engine suddenly left the lines. It tore down a pier of the bridge and plunged into the bed of an abandoned canal close to the river, dragging with it the rest of the train.

SUBMERGED

The engine and the first coach disappeared beneath the water. The second coach was partially submerged. The remaining coaches, including two sleeping cars, toppled down over the embankment leading to the bridge and came to rest just short of the canal.

The three persons whose bodies have been recovered are a doctor of Williamsport (Pennsylvania), the engine-driver and stoker. The engine-driver's neck was broken.

Miss Ann Gleitzer, chief telephone operator at Sunbury, saw the accident through the window of the local telephone exchange, and immediately gave the alarm.

BURST OF FLAME

"I was standing by the window," she said, "when I heard a terriffic noise. I saw a burst of flame. There were awful groans and shouts, and I knew that help was needed." She then called up every hospital and every police station in the neighbourhood.

Rescue workers, doctors and ambulances were rushed to the scene of the accident, but they had a terrible task tending the dead and injured.

It was pitch dark, the sleepers of the railway bridge had burst into flame, and the whole bridge had become a blazing mass, threatening to collapse on the coaches and rescue workers below. In addition, the temperature was five degrees below zero.

He later received Marshal Franchet D'Esperet, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Forces in the Salonika campaign during the war, and General Denain, Minister for Air in M. Laval's Cabinet.

To-morrow morning King Carol will lay a wreath on the tomb of the French Unknown Soldier, beneath the Arc de Triomphe.

M. Antonescu, Rumanian Minister of Finance, is expected in Paris on Sunday, with the object of concluding a Franco-Rumanian commercial treaty.

RE-ARMING OF THE NATIONS

GERMANY AND SUGGESTED BRITISH LOAN

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Friday.

The suggestion that a big British armaments loan is under consideration has evoked lively interest in the German Press. So far there are no comments, but the Boersen Zeitung seizes this opportunity for declaring that Germany is not leading in this new armaments race.

It says: "Preparations are being made for the construction of Germany's first aircraft-carrier, and plans are on foot for the building of further battleships in 1936 and following years, in accordance with the principle of equality in quality."

It adds: "Germany by no means stands at the head of the re-arming nations, despite the great disparity which has to be made good."

THREATENED ROOSEVELT'S LIFE

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Friday.

Sentence of ninety days' imprisonment was passed to-day upon Mr. Austin Phelps-Palmer, a rich sportsman and clubman and retired engineer, for sending letters to President Roosevelt blaming the Government for his financial losses, and threatening to strangle him.

He was arrested by secret service men and confessed to sending the letters to the President. It is said that Palmer wrote the letters because he had lost a fortune of a million dollars.

A public meeting of the Irish Beet Growers' Association will be held at Fermoy on February 3, and speakers will include Mr. J. M. Greene, the Chairman of the Association.

FOR ARREST OF STEAMER

ATTEMPT TO SERVE WRIT

SEQUEL TO A COLLISION

A WRIT for the arrest of the Italian steamer Fedora, which was involved in a collision off Dungeness, Kent, yesterday, with the Russian steamer Pravda, has been given on the instructions of the Admiralty Marshal.

The Admiralty Marshal is an official of the Admiralty Division of the High Court.

Two Customs officers went out from Folkestone Harbour in the motor boat Southern Queen, but owing to heavy seas their craft was compelled to put back before it could get alongside the Fedora, which is anchored in Dungeness Bay.

Mr. T. Weatherhead, the boatman in charge of the Southern Queen, said, on their return: "I knew what we were going out for, but I know nothing of the contents of the writ which the officers wished to execute. The weather became worse soon after we left for the steamer, big seas breaking over our boat, and we thought it best to put back to Folkestone."

The Fedora was still at anchor about four miles south-west of Sandgate, near Folkestone, last night, with two Dover tugs, and a third tug, believed to belong to a Dutch firm, standing by. It is expected that another effort to execute the writ will be made to-day, as there was the prospect of a southerly gale last night.

The Fedora has damage to No. 2 hold, on the port side, below and above the water-line.

The Dungeness motor lifeboat, which was launched early yesterday, returned last night, and the coxswain said that the steamer had refused offers of assistance from him, and also the tugs. "She is in ballast," he said, "and, I understand, outward bound, but I do not know where for. I was unable to make myself understood to any of the crew.

"So far as I know nobody was injured in the collision.

"The Fedora was steering a zigzagging course when we first sighted her, and flying the 'out of control' signal."

The first news came in a brief radio message picked up by Niton Wireless Station. This was an S.O.S. from the Fedora, which stated there had been a collision. The Pravda, which was reported to have her bows badly crumpled, proceeded to an anchorage in the Downs.

MME. TROTSKY'S APPEAL

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Friday.

An appeal by Madame Trotsky, who is now in Norway, to the American public for help on behalf of her son and daughter-in-law, is prominently displayed in the newspapers here. Mme Trotsky asserts that her son and daughter-in-law are imprisoned in the Soviet Union on account of the political activities of Trotsky himself. She admits having been given an assurance that they are not in prison, but declares that this is absolutely false.

The International Committee for Political Prisoners inquired of the Soviet Embassy in Washington and received the following answer: "We have no information on the matter which interests you."

SUDDEN DEATH OF CONDYLIS

"STRONG MAN OF GREECE"

GENERAL WHO RESTORED KING

LIBERALS NOT TO FORM GOVERNMENT

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ATHENS, Friday.

GENERAL CONDYLIS, the former Dictator and "King-maker," who afterwards quarrelled with the King he had restored to the Greek Throne, died from heart failure this morning.

He was popularly known as the "strong man of Greece," and one of its most dramatic personalities. His death removes a powerful factor from the Greek political arena. Indeed, the marked hostility which he had displayed to the King's post-restoration policy, particularly the amnesty granted to political offenders implicated in last year's Venezelist plot, had given risen to rumours that he might engineer a coup to place an anti-Venezelist Government in the saddle.

General Condylis had been suffering from angina pectoris for some time, and for the last three days he had been confined to his bed. This morning he seemed to be much better, and his doctors allowed him to receive a number of visitors, including several political friends.

DEPUTY PRESENT

Shortly after midday he got out of bed to gargle. M. Mercouris, a deputy was with him. As he was gargling he suddenly fell to the ground. M. Mercouris and two of his doctors who were still in the house rushed to his assistance, but they could only testify that he was dead.

According to the newspaper, Estia, the doctors have decided to wait twenty-four hours before embalming his body, for fear that death may be only apparent.

General Condylis will be given a State funeral on Sunday with the highest honours. The whole of the garrison of Athens will take part in it.

KING SEES LEADER

The King received M. Sophoulis, the leader of the Liberals, the biggest single party since the elections, this afternoon. After the interview M. Sophoulis told the Press that he had received no mandate to form a Cabinet.

He added that he had told the King that, since no party had obtained an absolute majority at the elections, it would be best to wait until the Chamber had met on March 12th and elected its President before appointing a new Premier. Until then he suggested that M. Demerdjis should remain in power.

FROM "THE TIMES"

(BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT.)

NEW PHASE IN RUSSIA

The Times, in a leading article to-day on the decree closing the torgsin shops, says: The plain truth is that Soviet Russia, by deciding to consolidate her resources by deliberately setting aside many of the grandiose schemes promised for the second Five Years Plan, has made herself a strong and formidable Power. Her Government is more firmly entrenched than any she has had since 1905, the year of the people's great demonstration. In several spheres of industrial production she is among the leaders of the world; already she is exporting machinery of the kind which only five years ago she was starving her people to buy. In natural resources, from oil and cotton to sugar beet, she wields a considerable influence in world trade. Perhaps the most startling report presented to the Central Executive Committee in Moscow a fortnight ago was that the Red Army is now on a peace footing of 1,300,000 men, with trained reserves to the number of 5,000,000, but other reports on industry and agriculture were equally significant in their way.

We may abhor Soviet teaching and political practice, but we cannot discount the natural resources of Russia or the Soviet determination to exploit them. Yet the paradoxes of Soviet Russia remain. As a totalitarian State she may be explained. As a Communist State—or, as the Bolshevists declare, one on the way to Communism—she is less easily explained. The present phase of individual incentive is declared to be only a breathing space in a campaign which will soon be resumed, and not halted until all share alike in a society without differences of class, wealth or opportunity. Is Soviet Russia on the right road to that end? The present population consists largely of the young, and while at a formative age they are being encouraged with hopes of individual reward for individual effort. Some of their elders are being given high salaries and great privileges. Unless the general standard of living rises miraculously in the near future, the people are not very likely to unlearn that which now they are taught or to forego individual profit for the sake of a flat uniformity.

In international affairs there is also the same paradox between theory and practice. The Soviet Government seek friendship with other Governments. The Comintern, which includes members of the Soviet Government, works to overthrow those same foreign Powers. At present the Soviet are inclined to belittle the Comintern activities, but other Governments cannot do so, and no measure would do more to help the Soviet Government's official policy than a clear statement on their position vis-à-vis the Comintern.

DEATH FOLLOWS ROAD ACCIDENT

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

DROGHEDA, Friday.

An inquest was opened here to-day by Dr. W. Bradley, Coroner, into the death of Patrick Byrne (24), of 96 Chord road, Drogheda, who died in the Drogheda District Hospital this morning.

It was stated in evidence that the deceased man was walking along the Killineer road with a girl friend, when a motor car driven by Mr. Stewart Johnson, 31 Cicero Gardens, Belfast, struck him. The girl screamed, and the car pulled up, but Byrne was unconscious on the road, suffering from severe head injuries, and remained in that condition until his death this morning.

The inquest was adjourned.

The driver, Mr. Johnson, was charged last evening before a Peace Commissioner, and remanded on bail of £100 to the next Drogheda Court.

The Lord Mayor of Belfast acknowledges subscriptions to the Belfast Coal Relief Fund amounting to £2,547 19s. 5d.

THE FREE STATE UNEMPLOYED

LIVE REGISTER TOTAL OF 144,764

UNPRECEDENTED FIGURE

IMMEDIATE DAIL DEBATE LIKELY

UNEMPLOYMENT in the Free State has reached a record figure, according to returns officially issued last night.

The total number on the register of employment exchanges and branch offices on Monday last (27th January) was 144,764.

This figure is without precedent in the Free State. It is likely to call for serious debate when the Dail reassembles next week. When the attention of Mr. William Norton, T.D., leader of the Labour Party, was called to it last night, he was indisposed to make any comment, but indicated that he intended to deal with it in a speech which he will make in his constituency at Newbridge to-morrow.

OPPOSITION ORGAN'S COMMENT

This week's United Ireland, the organ of the United Ireland Party, in an editorial, deals with the situation.

"That the condition of the farmers and of most other classes in the community is serious," it says, "is indicated by the unemployment figures, which last week reached the highest total ever recorded. Since the beginning of December there has been a very steady increase in the number of those registered as seeking work at the employment exchanges; and now, in spite of all the measures that the Government has taken to counterbalance the damage done by its fatal continuance of the economic war, the number of those who can find no employment is greater than it ever was in our history.

"The seriousness of the position is further emphasised by the fact that during the past year, in spite of the operation of the Unemployment Assistance Act and other measures taken by the State—at the expense of the taxpayer—to relieve distress, the Dublin Board of Public Assistance has been forced to increase its payments, so that during the past twelve months the number both of those given relief and of the amount paid out in assistance has risen by well over 20 per cent. . . . If conditions in America were normal at the present time, there is no doubt that the effects of the Government policy would have been emphasised by emigration on an unprecedented scale."

CO. MONAGHAN ARMED RAID

BELFAST ARMS RAID

POLICE SERGEANT'S STORY

GUNMEN SHELTERED BY CHILDREN

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

The gun-battle in the gate lodge of Campbell College was described in the Belfast Custody Court to-day by Sergeant Ian Hay, who was seriously wounded by gunmen, who, it is alleged, were attempting to carry out a raid for the rifles of the Campbell College O.T.C. Bernard Rooney, Thompson street, Belfast, is charged with attempted murder. Also in the dock was Edward McCartney, Oranmore street, Belfast, who is charged with illegal possession of arms. Both accused men were committed for trial at the Belfast Commission in custody.

Sergeant Hay, who was promoted from a constable after the shooting, said he was on duty inside the gates at the Hawthornden road entrance to the college about 8.30 p.m. on the 27th December last. He heard people moving about on the road, and three men took up position behind one of the gate pillars. Three others walked to the door of the gate lodge. One knocked, and the door was opened. The two smaller men went in. The third hesitated for half a minute, and witness saw it was Rooney, whom he had known before. Rooney looked towards the gate, took off his cap with his left hand and wound his scarf over his head. He replaced his cap and went into the house, pushing the door to.

"I heard terrific screaming from a woman in the lodge, as if she was in danger," said the sergeant. "At that moment I was shot through the shoulder from behind me. I jumped up and made for the gate lodge door, with my revolver drawn. Just at the door the shooting became general, both inside and outside the grounds. A shot passed my head like the thunder of a train, and struck the wall above me.

FACED WITH REVOLVER

"I pushed open the door of the gate lodge and found Rooney facing me in the porch with a service revolver in his hand. He made a remark about the police, and ran across the kitchen. I followed into the kitchen. There were two other men with Rooney, all of them with revolvers, at the far side of the kitchen.

"Rooney and on of the others opened fire at me from about ten feet. I fired in return and hit one. This man was aiming at me, but he was just too late, and he fell and the revolver fell from his hand. When I found the revolver afterwards it was fully loaded.

District-Inspector Geelan (prosecuting)—Were you hit in the room?—Yes. I felt a sting under my arm, another hit me near the neck, one went into my thigh, and another hit me on the body, broke two ribs and went into my arm. Rooney kept firing all the time."

There were then three people and two children in the room. The gunmen took positions behind the children and the young woman who was standing up. When the men appeared to have emptied their revolvers they hesitated.

"I shouted, 'I have them now,'" said the sergeant. "They went behind a curtain and I went after them." He detailed how he searched the house, but the men had disappeared.

POLICE FIRED ON

Constable Massie said that when on duty with other police on the Hawthornden road he heard the shooting from the gate lodge. They ran towards Belmont road, where about seven men had gathered. The men ran away on the approach of the police. They disregarded shouts of "Halt," and opened fire on the police with revolvers. The police returned the fire and overtook McCartney. Witness had not seen him with firearms in his possession. He was searched by Constable McCairsh, who found a revolver and six rounds of ammunition in his pockets. The revolver was loaded.

Sergeant Connolly said that Rooney, in reply to the charge of attempted murder, declared: "Nothing to say. It is only a frame-up."

Mr. James Campbell for Rooney, applied for bail, adding: "This is a hideous mistake in the identification of Rooney, who will prove that he was not at the gate lodge at the time of the shooting."

VESTMENTS IN CHURCH BURNED

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

The Most Rev. Dr. Mageean and the Very Rev. Canon O'Boyle, P.P., claimed £100 compensation at the Antrim Court here to-day for damage caused by fire to St. Teresa's Church, Ballydownfin, Derriaghy.

Evidence of malice having been given, an agreed figure of £39 was accepted.

Canon O'Boyle stated that when he went to the church he found that a window of the sacristy had been broken, and a large chest, which contained a number of vessels, had been burned. The place was strewn with match ends and candle grease. Four sets of vestments, together with altar boys' soutanes and surplices, had been destroyed by fire.

Counsel said that apparently entrance had been forced in order to set fire to the building, as no attempt had been made to remove a number of silver articles stored there.

PATENTS OFFICE PROCEDURE

AN ALLEGATION OF DELAY

EVIDENCE TAKEN AT COMMISSION

INVESTIGATION of an allegation of dereliction of duty on the part of the Controller of Patents occupied a large part of the proceedings yesterday at a sitting of the Commission of Enquiry into Patents, Designs and Trade Mark Law (Mr. James Geoghegan, K.C., Chairman, presiding), at the Patents Office, Merrion square, Dublin.

The allegation was contained in a statement made at a previous sitting of the Commission by Mr. F. H. Litton, of Messrs. MacEntee and Litton, of 17 Westland row, Dublin, who complained of serious delays in the office dealing with patent applications, and gave a list of cases in which delays, he held, occurred in the office after he had complied with the requirements of the Act.

"VERY SERIOUS"

When the proceedings began yesterday Mr. Edward A. Cleary, barrister-at-law, a member of the Commission, said that the witness had made a very serious charge against the controller—that certain sections of the Act of Parliament were not being carried out by him.

Replying to Mr. Cleary, the witness said that he did not consider a period of five and three-quarter months an unreasonable one as between the time of application and acceptance. He agreed that in the Controller's statutory reports, issued each year, it had been clearly shown that since 1930 there had been a gradual progress towards wiping out the arrears to be dealt with, and the report in 1935 stated that the arrears in the Patent Section had been overtaken, and the work there was then up to date.

Asked if he was aware that that had been the position prior to the issue of the report and was also the position to-day, the witness said the report stated that, and it was clear enough. But that did not mean that certain sections of the Act could be dispensed with. There had been entirely unwarranted delays.

Mr. Cleary—I say emphatically there is none, and I suggest that your allegation made now of undue delay is groundless and made loosely, and with utter disregard of the consequences of such ill-considered allegation and the publicity given it in the Press. Have you any evidence to support these unfounded charges?

Mr. Litton—You say they are unfounded. I hold that they are perfectly well founded.

TELEPHONE CONVERSATION

Asked again by Mr. Cleary if he had any evidence, the witness referred to a statement which, he said, was made to him by the Chief Examiner of Patents, to whom he was speaking on the telephone some time about February 11th, 1933, and said that he had then been told that no technical examinations were being carried out on the instructions he had received from the Controller, and he was simply to take a copy of the specifications.

The witness admitted that in his allegation at the last meeting, that certain sections of the Statute were not being complied with or carried out, he was making a very grave charge and dereliction of duty against the Controller.

Mr. Cleary—Have you any other evidence to support this serious and grave charge?

Witness—I was told by Mr. A. P. Connolly, Secretary to the Minister at the time, that the Minister had given an order that the new procedure was to be stopped and the old procedure resumed.

On the suggestion of the Chairman, the matter was postponed in order to enable Mr. Litton to produce documentary evidence in support of his charges, especially that relating to telephone conversations referred to.

The Commission adjourned until 3.15 p.m. on Friday next.

THE BENEVOLENT ASSOCIATION

OVER 1,000 NON-SUBSCRIBERS

OWING to the death of the Chairman, Mr. Joseph E. MacDermott, Mr. Patrick J. Brady, Deputy-Chairman, presided at the annual general meeting of the Solicitors' Benevolent Association at the Solicitors' Buildings, Four Courts, Dublin, yesterday.

Before entering on the business of the meeting, Mr. Brady referred to the death of their Chairman, and said that no solicitor had ever taken a greater or more practical interest in the Benevolent Association. Mr. MacDermott had been a subscribing member for upwards of 52 years. Many a recipient of the Association's help had good reason to remember that it was through Mr. MacDermott that a claim for assistance was successfully pleaded by their President. He followed as President one who was intimately acquainted with the Association and its needs. The late Sir George Roche would rank among their most zealous Presidents. He set a very high standard. Mr. MacDermott had reached that standard, if, indeed, he had not surpassed it. From the time he occupied the chair he had presided over their meetings with sympathy and kindliness of heart. His annual addresses showed a very real sympathy with the objects of their Association. Apart from that, these addresses exhibited also a literary flavour, with which rare culture and wide reading had endowed him.

As a token of sympathy with the relatives of the late Mr. MacDermott, the members present stood for a moment in silence.

Death, the Chairman said, had again taken many members during the year. To the relatives of each of these deceased members of the profession they tendered genuine sympathy. Among the names of those who passed away since last annual meeting, there was one who played a noble part in bringing the Solicitors' Benevolent Association to the position it occupied to-day. To know the late Mr. Earl Bland was to love him. As the report stated, he was an active member of the Association for 49 years and Secretary for 39 years. He possessed to a remarkable degree the spirit of charity and practical love of his neighbour which was evidenced by the sympathetic and zealous friend he proved of the Association. When he became Secretary the funds of the Association were £882. When he retired from that office they were over £7,000. It was not too much to say that his untiring and unselfish efforts played a very large part in bringing about this state of things. He was elected a patron last year, and passed away last October to the genuine regret not only of his profession, but a host of friends.

THE REPORT

Speaking of the annual report, the Chairman said that the Benevolent Association had been in existence for 72 years, and during that long period much had been done to relieve members of the profession who had fallen by the way and had left behind them dependents with little of the world's goods. During these years many members of the profession, both by the creation of annuities, legacies and subscriptions, had done much to build up the funds and strengthened the hands of the directorate to help those who could do little to help themselves. It would be untrue not to say that they had received much support from the members of the profession, but it is also true to say that they did not get all that support from the profession for which they would naturally look. They are many solicitors who forget the existence of their Association. Unluckily, their needs, so far from diminishing, grew more every succeeding year. There were about 1,600 solicitors in all Ireland, and yet of that number there were 1,100 members of the profession who did not give a penny piece to help towards the relief of those who, through death, ill-health and other causes, had been obliged to turn to them for assistance.

In 1934 they paid out, between grants and annuities, £1,025 13s. 9d. During last year they exceeded that amount and paid out £1,142 7s., and if they had larger funds at their disposal that sum would have been considerably increased. The directors were most anxious to increase the amounts of grants and annuities in the distressing cases that come under their notice, and they could only do so by receiving more generous support from the profession. The amount spent last year exceeded by over £100 the amount for 1934. They were anxious to remedy that state of things, and a special general meeting of the Association had been held to alter the rule which fixed the annual subscription at one guinea to provide that, in the case of apprentices and those admitted less than three years, the subscription would be half a guinea.

Another rule had been amended to provide that the management shall consist of not less than forty directors, of whom not less than one-half should be metropolitan and the remainder provincial directors.

He then moved the adoption of the report.

Mr. Michael E. Knight (Monaghan). President of the Incorporated Law Society, seconded the motion, and paid a warm tribute to the memory of the late Mr. MacDermott. He suggested that something should be done to increase the membership through the medium of Sessional Bar Associations.

ELECTION OF DIRECTORS

On the motion of Mr. R. J Mallins, seconded by Mr. Proud, the directors were re-elected with the following additional metropolitan directors—Eugene F. Collis, E. R. McC. Dix, W. J. Norman, Cecil Stapleton, Dermot McGillycuddy, and the following provincial directors—J. Travers Wolfe (from metropolitan list), H. Davidson, Ballinasloe; E. J. Thornton, Waterford; F. C. C. Mackintosh, Newtownards; L. J. Holmes, Antrim, and A. D. Comyn, Loughrea.

Messrs. Robert Hayes and R. Douglas English were re-elected auditors.

Votes of thanks were passed to the Press and to the Chairman.

TIPPERARY MURDER CHARGE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

LIMERICK, Friday.

At the Limerick District Court to-day Superintendent Buggy, Newport, applied for a remand on the charge against William O'Reilly, a travelling tinsmith of the murder of John Dundon, his father-in-law, at Newport on the 17th of January.

Mr. M. Tynan, solicitor, said that the accused man admitted striking Dundon.

District Justice Flood—That will simplify matters. These two men were members of one tribe, and the death of Dundon was the result of a fracas. All the evidence that will be required is evidence to show that the blow was the cause of death.

A further remand in custody for a week was granted.

KILDARE RATE COLLECTION

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

NAAS, Friday.

At a meeting of the Kildare County Council to-day, a letter was read from the Minister for Local Government, stating that out of a total warrant of £114,544, a sum of £71,053, or 62 per cent., remained uncollected, and the progress made could not be regarded as other than most unsatisfactory. The Minister accordingly notified the Council that he would not sanction payment of full poundage to the collectors who failed to account for the first moieties on their warrants by the 31st inst.

Miss Darby said that she was aware of a number of people who were anxious to pay their rates, but who had not received demand notes.

The Chairman said that that was a very serious matter, and the Secretary said that he would have the matter investigated.

THE WARBLE FLY PEST

NEW NORTHERN ORDER

AVERTING LOSS TO CATTLE TRADE

FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Friday.

FARMERS have long suffered from the ravages of the warble fly, which, directly and indirectly, costs the agricultural community hundreds of thousands of pounds annually.

A representative of a prominent tanning firm stated last month that nearly half of the hides shipped across Channel from April to July were badly warbled, with a consequent depreciation of about 5s. per hide, and it has been frequently pointed out that the loss incurred on every warbled carcase amounts to almost as much as the bounty paid on fat cattle under the beef subsidy scheme.

MASS ATTACK

Careful experiments have now shown that if cattle are dressed at monthly intervals during the warble fly season with a Derris preparation a 100 per cent. kill is obtained. The Northern Ministry of Agriculture have, accordingly, judged the time ripe for making the dressing of warbled cattle compulsory throughout Northern Ireland, so that by a mass attack the fly may be eradicated from the country in a few years, as has been the case in Denmark.

The reason for this new Order is not, however, simply the desire to do away with a harmful and costly pest; there are other considerations which make it impossible for the Ministry to act otherwise. Both the British and Free State authorities have made a similar order, and not to follow suit, even were the choice possible, would have been fatal to the interests of the live-stock industry. For, just as it has been impossible since December last to dispose of privately ear-marked animals profitably across Channel, so, in time, all warbled animals will likewise become a drug on the market, when the butchers and tanners find that there is a plentiful supply of uninfested cattle.

The new order, which came into force yesterday, is thus of two-fold value. It will eradicate a costly pest, and it will also help to keep open for Ulster farmers the cross-Channel markets.

THE TREATMENT

The treatment required is simple, inexpensive and effective. Infested cattle are to be dressed with a wash consisting of a Derris preparation, of the prescribed strength, at intervals of twenty-eight days, commencing in each year between the 15th and 22nd days of March, or as soon after that as the maggots appear. The dressing is to be continued, at intervals of twenty-eight days, until no further parasites appear. Experiments have shown that, normally, four such dressings are necessary to achieve complete success, and the order allows for the cessation of treatment after the end of June. The dressing is to be applied so that it penetrates through the breathing hole and comes into contact with the maggot.

The Ministry has ensured that only suitable preparations will be placed on sale for the purpose of compliance with this order. So far, three officially tested Derris powders (Polvo, Cooper's Warble Fly Powder and Paragad) are on the market, procurable in conveniently-sized packages, and at reasonable prices; the cost of dressing an animal four times is estimated at between 1d. and 2d. per head. Great care should be taken to see that the directions given by the manufacturers as to dilution and use are strictly followed.

REMOVING PROCESS

As an alternative to the dressing, the Order permits the removal of maggots by squeezing them out from the backs of cattle. Maggots removed in this way must be effectively destroyed, and the process should commence between the 15th and 22nd days of March, or as soon after that as the maggots have reached the stage at which they can be so removed. This removing process is to be repeated at intervals of not more than ten days until the maggots cease to appear in the skin on the backs of the cattle. As will be realised, this removal method takes more time, and is more troublesome than dressing, and, consequently, the dressing system is recommended.

Veterinary Inspectors of the Ministry will be on the look-out for warbled animals in markets, fairs, saleyards, and farms, and persons who have failed to treat their cattle as laid down will be prosecuted. The Ministry is distributing widely a special circular regarding the Order, and leaflet No. 64 regarding the warble fly is obtainable free of charge on application to the Secretary, Ministry of Agriculture, Stormont.

HOLLYWOOD BALL AT KILLINEY

A GALAXY OF FILM "STARS"

Last night an original and picturesque dance was held at Stonehurst, Killiney, the residence of Mr. Justice O'Byrne and Mrs. O'Byrne. About one hundred and fifty guests assembled, all interpreting "stars" of the screen. The dance was organised by Miss Early, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Early, and Mrs. O'Byrne kindly lent her house for the occasion. A full studio, with all equipment, was fitted in the dance room, with camera men and producers working as at Universal City. There were some beautiful and elaborate costumes, the dancers cleverly filling their various roles.

There were, of course, several Greta Garbos. Mr. Justice O'Byrne and Mrs. O'Byrne and Mr. and Mrs. Early wore evening dress. Miss Ida Early was a charming Katherine Hepburne. Captain Silvie Leigh, as Henry VIII., arrived with six wives! Surgeon Barniville, who was with Mrs. Barniville, acted as one of the camera men. The State Solicitor and Mrs. Corrigan were in evening dress, but Mr. Cecil Lavery and Mrs. Lavery wore period costumes. Mr. Dermot MacDougall was a Charlie Chaplin; Miss Maureen O'Carroll came as Maureen O'Sullivan, and her sister as Gracie Fields. Alice in Wonderland was interpreted by Mrs. McGilligan, but Mr. McGilligan was undisguised as the Deputy from the Dail. Miss Connolly was a dainty Shirley Temple, and Miss Fagan, in her long black velvet gown, was recognised as Greta Garbo in Anna Karenina. Mr. Desmond Rushton made a vivid picture of Rasputin, and Miss Una Hayes was Ginger Rogers, her sister representing Irene Dunne. The Bengal Lancer was well represented by Mr. Michael Gallagher, and Miss Haidee Kavanagh was another Greta Garbo. Barrett of Wimpole street, with his daughter, Elizabeth, were recognised as Mr. and Mrs. Judd, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Connolly came as Mr. and Mrs. Sherlock Holmes. Miss E. Gallagher was Bebe Daniels, and Mr. Fallon, Barrister-at-Law, made a robust Man of Aran. One of the best characters of the evening was Mr. H. Maguire as E. A. Oliver, Mr. J. Maguire representing Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

£1,000 TO RUN A GAMBLING PARTY

LADY'S EVIDENCE OF AN OFFER

FAILURE OF BIG LONDON LAWSUIT

LADY CLEVELAND, permanent appeal organiser of the Ivory Cross Dental Aid Fund, giving evidence yesterday in the card-party lawsuit in the King's Bench Division, London, declared that she was offered £1,000 if she would run a big gambling party.

Mr. Keith Hugh Williams, financier and company promoter, sued Mr. Jack Trevor Trevor, who organised a gaming party at Sunderland House in December, 1934, for the benefit of the Ivory Cross Dental Aid Fund of the Royal Northern Hospital. He alleged that Mr. Trevor allowed persons of bad character to be present, with the result that he lost £11,200.

During his cross-examination yesterday by Sir Patrick Hastings (for Mr. Trevor), Mr. Williams was reprimanded by Mr. Justice Finlay for an observation that he had made.

Sir Patrick asked him if he could suggest any comparatively honest man who could be called, and the witness replied: "I am afraid you could not call yourself, Sir Patrick."

"That is an exceedingly impudent and improper observation," Mr. Justice Finlay told Mr. Williams, "and I shall have to take drastic steps if you speak like that again."

The card party to which the action is a sequel was organised by Mr. Trevor for the benefit of the Ivory Cross Dental Aid Fund of the Royal Northern Hospital. Mr. Williams alleged that in a letter of invitation Mr. Trevor "warranted" that the party would be properly supervised so that no persons of bad character would be present, and that in breach of that warranty Mr. Trevor negligently allowed such persons to attend, with the result that Mr. Williams lost £11,200.

Mr. Trevor denied that any warranty was given or broken, and he also denied that he acted negligently.

AN ANONYMOUS LETTER

In cross-examination by Sir Patrick Hastings, Mr. Williams said that he had detectives working for him since December last. Lord Queensberry, whom he saw in Court, was at the party of which he complained.

Mr. Williams (holding up a piece of paper)—I have received information this morning which I did not have before.

Sir Patrick—What is it?—An anonymous letter.

Mr. Williams read—"Re Trevor. It may interest you to know that this man's real name is Abrahams. He changed it some years ago, when he was made bankrupt, to Trevor.—(Signed)—A Well Wisher."

Sir Patrick suggested that witness had deliberately determined to read it out while he had a chance.

Mr. Williams denied the suggestion.

Later he said that, at the moment, he was not suggesting that Mr. Trevor made one farthing for himself out of the party.

PLAINTIFF'S SUGGESTION

Sir Patrick—I gather your suggestion quite openly made is that Mr. Abrahams and Mr. Saville cheated you?—That quite definitely is right.

Is there anyone else you can suggest who cheated you?—Yes, Dave Solomons.

Mr. Williams agreed that he won £2,200 at baccarat, not, however at Mr. Saville's table.

Sir Patrick—When did you first begin to lose?—At Sir Alfred Butt's bank at baccarat. Then he lost £3,500. That game was perfectly straight.

Sir Patrick—What I suggest is that Sir Alfred stopped playing because of the way you were playing?—I was playing perfectly straight, Sir Patrick.

Asked if anyone at the party, except him, was betting anything approaching £5,000 on the turn of a card?—Mr. Williams said that on three occasions he betted £1,000, losing two and winning one. He did not think anyone else was playing in quite so high a way.

LADY CLEVELAND'S EVIDENCE

Lady Mary Kathleen Cleveland, organiser of the Ivory Cross Dental Aid Fund, of which Mr. Trevor is vice-president, said that Mr. Trevor suggested a card party as a good way of making "large money."

Two months ago she told Mr. Trevor that Mr. Solomon had been to see her and offered her £1,000 if she would run a big gambling party. Mr. Trevor said: "Don't have anything to do with him at all," and she replied that she would turn down the proposition.

Cross-examined she said that four or five invitations were sent to Lady Huntingdon.

Sir Patrick—Now about Mr. Biff Byford. Did that gentleman get in on a card which originally had been sent to Lady Huntingdon?—I think so.

She said that Finck and Goldstone were asked by Mr. Trevor to come to the party, and it was he who telephoned saying that they were not to be allowed in, because he had been told that their play had not been straight at Mrs. Paul's. He asked Mr. Williams to the party at the request of Mrs. Van der Elst, who said he was a good player. He replied that he would let "Sam" Hindlip know.

£50 FOR EXPENSES

Lord Hindlip said that he agreed to act as croupier at Sunderland House at Lady Cleveland's suggestion. She gave him £50 towards expenses.

Mr. Justice Finlay—Expenses of what?—I might have to entertain certain people there. He told Mr. Trevor he had heard there were some irregularities connected with three men at Mrs. Paul's party and it would be a good thing if they were not present. One was a Mr. Goldstone. The others might have been a Mr. Finck and a Mr. Freeman. He told Mr. Trevor he would not go to the party if they were there, and he believed Mr. Trevor said he would stop them coming.

Sir William Jowitt—Was there trouble about Sir Alfred Butt and his chips?

Lord Hindlip—I heard there was. He relieved Mr. Elliott as croupier about six in the morning. Cards were counted, and about 30 were missing.

Sir William asked if he saw anything else odd?

Lord Hindlip—I do not think I saw anything odd at all. Twenty croupiers, including one professional, nine stewards, 18 lady helpers, and a large number of changeurs were at the party. He would consider "extremely unfair" a suggestion that a croupier was fraudulent because he used his hands. He never had the slightest reason to think that Saville and Abrahams were men who ought not to have been invited.

JUDGE'S DECISION

When the case for the plaintiff closed, Sir Patrick Hastings, for the defendant, submitted that there was nothing whatever for Mr. Trevor to answer.

Mr. Justice Finlay said the case was unique, and he hoped it would not be followed by any other of a like nature. He expressed the earnest hope that after this case no reputable charity would ever again resort to so questionable a method of raising money as the organisation of a gambling party of this character.

"I cannot resist saying this," added Mr. Justice Finlay. "I can say from personal experience how extraordinarily difficult it is to raise money for charity in order that the valuable work can be carried on, but I feel bound to add that such methods are to be severely discouraged."

The Judge said there was no evidence on the part of anybody to make a contract.

OBITUARY

D. P. MORAN

The death of Mr. D. P. Moran took place at his residence, Beulah, Sutton, Co. Dublin, yesterday. Mr. Moran was a well-known Irish journalist, and at the time of his death was editor of The Leader, a weekly paper which he founded in Dublin in 1900.

AN APPRECIATION

(By L. P. B.)

Thirty years ago D. P. Moran collaborated in a little book that was destined to have a great effect upon the Ireland of our day. It was entitled: "Ideals in Ireland," and he lived to see almost all the ideals for which he had striven either realised or on the way towards ultimate realisation. He desired an Ireland that would speak and treasure the Irish language, but would not regard that language as the ultimate and only test of nationality. He desired an Ireland that would have a balanced economy; in which industry would provide an outlet for the agricultural population, and an alternative for such as did not love the land. Above all, he desired an Ireland that would be free to map its own course, and to follow that course whithersoever it led. He was happy in that he lived to see the last, and the greatest, of his ideals realised; although many of his compatriots failed to see as clearly as he did that the ideal had been realised.

It may be that because of that patriotic astigmatism on the part of a large section of his compatriots the later days of D. P. Moran had not been either so serene or so enthusiastic as the beginning. Thirty years ago the days of struggle, at least in its final phase, had just begun. They were years that called for enthusiasm, rather than for that exact knowledge and precise detail demanded by the last decade of his fruitful life. Coming fresh from the struggle which Liberalism in England had made against what, in the language of the time, was called "the Balfourian reaction," he brought to Ireland some of that fine mentality which Massingham and Masterman and Lloyd George had given to England after the Boer War. And that, it will surely be realised by all who were privileged to know him well, was his contribution to the Ireland of his day

INSIDE THE QUEEN MARY

ARTISTIC INTERIOR DECORATION

FAMOUS ARTISTS COMMISSIONED

A MARBLE plaque of Her Majesty the Queen is to be carried in the great new Cunard-White Star liner Queen Mary. It will stand at the head of the staircase which faces the main hall of the ship. No more appropriate work could have been chosen for this central position, as it was Her Majesty the Queen who went to Clydebank and christened the liner. The plaque has been executed by Lady Kennet—better known as Lady Hilton Young—and it has all the characteristic vitality of her art. It is about 5ft. 5ins. high.

In the interior decoration of the ship a new and individual artistic note has been struck. Famous artists are now busy completing the pictures and portraits that have been commissioned. Never before, it is said, has such scope been given to craftsmen and designers to exercise initiative and ability in decorations, furniture and fabrics.

ON VAST SCALE

Much of the work has, of course, had to be planned on a vast scale. Calculations respecting areas of woods have had to be made not in feet, but in acres.

The liner's main restaurant has an imposing work at one end by Philip Connard, R.A., and another at the other end by McDonald Gill. The latter is a most fascinating novelty in the form of an immense decorative map—70ft. long, 24ft. wide and 15ft. high—which shows the North Atlantic. Sailing across this great pictorial sea is an illuminated ship—the Queen Mary in miniature. This little vessel will be always moving over the sea when the liner is in service, and she will indicate to passengers the exact position of the Queen Mary at every stage of her voyage. The little ship's movements are automatically controlled.

SHOPPING CENTRE

For the ship's shopping centre, Maurice Lambert has done an ivory-tinted frieze, 50ft. long, illustrative of speed as represented by antelopes, runners on the track, motor-cars, aeroplanes, express trains and seaplanes.

Doris Zinkeisen has done a deep frieze on theatrical and circus themes. In the verandah grill, where this fine work is hung, the curtains are of Royal red plush, spangled with stars of gold and silver. Gold lace, too, conjures up memories of the old theatrical draperies.

Anna Zinkeisen is responsible for the ballroom decorations. She has designed the satin curtains, and the whole room is a shimmering mass of silvers and greys, even the dancing floor toning with the general colour scheme.

Dancing through all the ages is the theme of some unusual paintings on hide by Margot Gilbert, who has portrayed West Indian natives dancing the Rumba, given a lively version of modern chorus girls pirouetting to the footlights, and has also recalled, in contrast, the ceremonial dances of Egypt, the Three Graces of ancient days, and Chinese and Burmese group dancing.

SPORTING CARVINGS

Passengers who repair to the smoking-room will be able to look up at sporting carvings by James Woodford, who has also done decorative figures of the court cards.

Quite different is the subject chosen by Bainbridge Copnall for his series of bas relief carvings in the main restaurant. He has dealt with shipbuilding through the ages.

In the long gallery there is a painting of an evening scene on the Avon by Algernon Newton. Bertram Nicholls has done English pastoral scenes, and John Skeaping three large mural carvings in the starboard gallery.

Kenneth Shoesmith has two panels of flower market scenes at opposite ends of the fireplace in the drawingroom.

MOLTEN METAL

Molten metal sprayed through a pistol assisted Rebel Stanton to make a striking bas relief for the tourist "A" Deck lounge. Tom Webster has enlivened the gymnasium with a series of caricatures of famous sporting personalities, some of whom will, no doubt, have an opportunity of seeing themselves while travelling in the ship.

Ornaments in aluminium over the transport and airways office reveal clear evidence again of the hand of Maurice Lambert, who has also done much arresting work over the proscenium in the spacious lounge. Charles Pears and Cedric Morris are two others whose work will be much admired.

GOSSIP FROM THE COURSE

HILL SONG'S SUCCESS

Pencraik Fails to Concede Weight to Morphine

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.
Friday Night.

AMATEUR riders have been well in the limelight at Manchester; for they rode four of the winners to-day, and had their measure of success at the New Year meeting, when they had seven victories in twelve races.

There is no doubt that Hill Song is in the top flight of hurdlers, and it would be difficult to over-estimate his real merit. He accomplished a fine performance in taking the Amateur Riders' Hurdle under a welter burden, the triumph being the third that he had scored over the course.

Mr. H. P. Bell, the owner-rider of Hill Song, has evidently no misgivings as to what the seven-year-old is capable of; for, though the going was very heavy, he sent Hill Song along from the start to make all the running. It was a severe task to impose on the gelding, and that he pulled through enhances his reputation.

Tiring at the Finish

In the last five furlongs Hill Song was certainly tiring. He jumped each of the last three hurdles to the left with none of his rivals near enough to take advantage and seriously challenge him.

Ashdrop is a most consistent mare, and was returning to winning form when she took the Distance Hurdle in a canter. She is evidently well endowed with stamina; for she was sent to the front at the end of a mile to maintain such a good gallop that the efforts of the opposition to get on terms were of no avail.

Probably the waiting tactics on Saxon were a little overdone, for though he made a spirited effort between the last two hurdles, he was never a menace to Ashdrop.

Never a Factor

Sledge failed to produce the running which enabled her to win at Leicester, and was never a factor.

Mr. Peter Cohen made a judicious purchase when he secured Lady Rowley privately after she had won at Birmingham, for she gave him a successful ride in the Rivington Steeplechase. After hanging at the rear for nearly half the journey, Lady Rowley was sent to the front over the water, from which time she was pulling over the others, who, despite desperate efforts, could not overtake her.

Promise Unfulfilled

Even Me and Carwood promised well for a couple of miles, and then compounded in a few strides.

A. Waudby rode a most vigorous finish on Morphine to win the Lune Steeplechase. Pencraik was a warm favourite, but after a gallant effort he found the concession of 23lb. to Morphine too great for him. All the way the pair dominated the position, and over the last fence the advantage was with Pencraik. A. Waudby, however, refused to admit defeat, and Morphine, responding well to his vigorous urging, overhauled the favourite close home and secured the spoils.

An Objection for Bumping

There was plenty of excitement over the finish of the Sale Steeplechase, which was won by Ginger Boy, who had to survive an objection for bumping. Tetracaun was first over the last fence, but received a bad bump on the flat that ruined his chance. Ginger Boy and Tuckmill had a dour tussle, the former only pulling through by inches.

A stubborn determination enabled Aston Abbots to succeed in the Leyland Hurdle. Tackling Dahomey and Belle of Louis over the last hurdle, his greater reserve in the run-in carried him through.

Selections

DELANEIGE is favoured by the condition of the "Little-Go" Steeplechase, and while he will be opposed by such useful 'chasers as Tapinois, Remus and Blue Prince, he should be able to make a return to winning form.

THE DUBARRY is now at the top of her form, and as the opposition in the Pendle Steeplechase is not likely to be formidable she should be able to win her third successive race—her second over this course since the advent of the new year.

Bill Boy took the Minden Rose Steeplechase last year. He has much the worst of the weights now with Kiltoi, who should reverse the last form between them. Taos, Tresca and Teddie G. all have chances, but I favour KILTOI, who is now at his best.

GALTEE MORE.

DELANEIGE TEST

Ardglass Preferred For the Arkwright Hurdle

DELANEIGE, who may be the chief Grand National hope of George Beeby's stable, appears to have an outstanding chance of scoring his first victory for two years in the Little-Go Steeplechase at Manchester to-day. He has much less weight to carry than would be the case in a handicap. For instance, he can meet both Remus and Blue Prince on 13lb. better terms compared with the weights allotted in the Grand National.

He gave a fairly good performance in the event won by Reynoldstown at Leicester early last month, considering that he was in need of a race. His recent gallops have been satisfactory, and even if he is not at his best he may be capable of disposing of the opposition here.

Remus should have won at Gatwick; for he was clear of his rivals at the last jump. The trouble with Mr. Berry's big horse is that he barely stays three miles. I doubt if he will be suited by the heavy going.

Blue Prince is a bold, speedy jumper, who possesses stamina. He should be in his element on this course, though I cannot visualise him as conceding 11lb. to Delaneige. It is a long time since either Richborough or Elevator won a race, and I feel justified in awarding a confident vote to DELANEIGE.

Taos will be running over his best distance in the Minden Rose Steeplechase. He had more in hand over Rallywood and Minto Crag at Nottingham than the official verdict of a neck and a head indicated.

Teddie G. has been troubling the handicappers of late. He was lucky to win his fourth successive race at Catterick; for Shrewmouse appeared to have the verdict in safe keeping until she fell close home. Shrewmouse is 10lb. better treated here. Still, she is an impetuous jumper, and I prefer to look elsewhere for a selection.

DARK RAVINE

is useful in the class. As he had something to spare when defeating Cubicle and Luckpenny at Wolverhampton I shall accord him my vote.

Ardglass appears to be well treated in the Arkwright Hurdle on his form with Latoi at the October meeting here. Another who can be fancied on the score of handicapping is Skylass, who won in runaway style at Catterick Bridge. I am content to choose this pair against the field, my preference being for who has taken kindly to fencing, may prove too good for The Dubarry at the weights.

ARDGLASS.

In the Pendle Novices' Steeplechase

MANCHESTER CITY,

The going will be very heavy at Plumpton, where I like the chances of Keen Blade (2.30) and Royal Count (3.0). Royal Count, who will be the mount of A. Jarvis, has done so well with Gosden's young 'chasers since he ran Lester Boy to a length at Windsor that I make him the best bet at this meeting.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Irish 'Chaser Joins Gosden's Team

Linby Hall, the Irish steeplechaser, who was purchased recently on behalf of Mr. A. E. Berry, has arrived at J. Gosden's Lewes stable to be trained.

Lincolnshire Scratchings

Astyanax, Pepino and Pricket were struck out of the Lincolnshire Handicap at 4.24 p.m. yesterday. These three horses are trained by the Hon. G. Lambton, who is still represented by Boothius (9st.) Negundo (8st. 2lb.) and Precious Pearl (7st. 10lb.). It is interesting to note that the scratchings were received by Messrs. Weatherby and Sons less than three hours after the publication of the weights. Astyanax is engaged in the Liverpool Spring Cup and the Rosebery Stakes at Kempton Park. Pricket is also nominated for the Rosebery Stakes, in which he is much better handicapped with Astyanax than was the case in the "Lincolnshire."

Amateur Riders Successful

As was the case on the second day of the new year fixture at Manchester, amateur riders were successful at the Castle Irwell racecourse yesterday. On the previous occasion the first five winners were ridden by amateurs. Yesterday they were successful on the first four.

TURF CLUB AND THE LATE KING

At a special meeting of the Turf Club and of the I.N.H.S. Committee, held at the Registry Office, Dublin, on Monday last, Mr. I. J. Blake, Senior Steward of the Turf Club, proposed, and Mr. A. D. Comyn, Senior Steward of the I.N.H.S. Committee, seconded, the following vote of condolence:—

"We, the Stewards and members of the Irish Turf Club and of the Irish National Hunt Steeplechase Committee, desire to express our profound sorrow at the death of our beloved Sovereign, King George V., and beg most respectfully to tender to His Majesty King Edward VIII., Queen Mary, and the Royal Family our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in their great loss."

The resolution was passed in silence, all the members standing; and the Keeper of the Match Book (Mr. F. Harold Clarke) was directed to forward copy of same to the Secretary of His Majesty King Edward VIII.

A wreath was sent from the Turf Club and I.N.H.S. Committee.

LEOPARDSTOWN PROGRAMME

BIG FIELDS TO-DAY

Knight of the Mist Fancied For the Chief Event

THE card to be submitted to visitors to Leopardstown this afternoon is a highly interesting one, with the Leopardstown Maiden Steeplechase standing out as the feature race. No less than fifteen runners have been declared, and with such as Knight of the Mist, Step Aside Lord, Sardis, Lobo, Peaceful Princess, and Bryan O'Linn in opposition, it should be an attractive race. Knight of the Mist impressed much when he won at Naas, and Sardis and Bryan O'Linn are also good winners, while Peaceful Princess has been showing remarkable form in hurdle races, and is said to be equally at home over the major obstacles. In the early part of last season Step Aside Lord showed distinct promise as a steeplechaser, and, if his jumping has improved, he will likely be the chief danger to Knight of the Mist. Selections:—

Stand Maiden Hurdle—The Ace.
Tower Hurdle—Lady Barney.

RUGBY FOOTBALL

WALES SHOULD WIN

Three Irish University Teams on Tour To-Day

THE second stage of the international championship will be reached this afternoon when Wales and Scotland will be engaged at Murrayfield, Edinburgh. Wales having beaten the All Blacks and drawn with England naturally will be favourites, but Scottish forwards have a way of upsetting calculations at times. Still, the form of the side against the All Blacks was not impressive, and as Wales had slightly the better of the argument against England a victory for the Principality seems the most likely outcome.

It will be a comparatively quiet afternoon as regards local football, the only match of any importance arranged for Dublin being that between Bective Rangers and Clontarf at Donnybrook. Both sides have excellent records, and it should be a closely contested game. Wanderers visit Palmerston at Clonskeagh with a good chance of reversing the result of their previous game. Lansdowne meet Monkstown at Sydney Parade, and Blackrock College and Old Wesley will be opposed at Williamstown. Continuing their Southern tour, Trinity play Constitution at Cork. Both University College, Dublin, and University College, Cork, go to Belfast, the former to play Malone and the latter to oppose Queen's University.

THE SECOND ROUND OF THE LEAGUE

INTEREST NOW CONFINED TO THREE TEAMS

At the opening of the second round of the Free State League interest is confined to but three clubs—Bohemians, Dolphin and Cork—with Reds United struggling to keep up with the leaders, but only one point ahead of Shamrock Rovers, St. James's Gate and Sligo Rovers. Bohemians, with 19 points out of a possible 22, and playing convincing football, are seemingly in a comfortable position; but the end of the journey is a long way off, and anything may happen. They do not appear, however, to be in the least danger of defeat from Drumcondra to-day, even at Tolka Park; but there are always possibilities for the home team on the Drumcondra ground, and, should they win this match, and Cork and Dolphin pull through to-morrow, the competition would have developed on intensely interesting lines. Cork of late have been playing sound and correct football, and their form makes them out a better team than Reds United, whom they play at Milltown. Dolphin visit Sligo to-morrow, and here also the records point to a Dolphin victory.

STROLLERS WIN BY TWO MATCHES

MARKED IMPROVEMENT IN LADIES' GOLF

BY OUR GOLF CORRESPONDENT.

The object of the monthly matches between Miss Blake's ladies' team and The Strollers, a combination of professionals and amateurs, is being gradually attained. They were arranged for the purpose of improving the standard of ladies' golf in Dublin, and yesterday at The Castle, Rathfarnham, the ladies played so well, and made such good use of their twelve strokes, that The Strollers, much stronger than in either of the two preceding matches, had to fight hard for their third win by two matches—6 to 4, with two halved. The ladies were led by Mrs. Todd, of Kilkenny, the only plus 2 lady player in the country, and for the first time since her return from America Miss Sherlock took her place in the team, every one of whom played strokes better than at Hermitage or Milltown.

Mrs. Todd, after being three down to W. Holley at the turn, brought the match to the 17th green, where the local professional was level fours. On the first nine her shots to the green were not played with her customary snap; but she got going properly from then on and made it one of the best finishes of the afternoon. The Royal Dublin professional, P. Mahon, although driving a prodigious ball and making no mistakes, could not give the strokes to Miss Sherlock. He was out in 35, but was then one down. The golf home was excellent, but Mahon never got in front. When one up at the 14th Miss Sherlock almost had a 2 at the 15th; but she did uncommonly well to halve the last two holes after Mahon had squared at the 16th.

Miss Pentony played some loose shots on the first nine against W. Nolan, who turned three up, but she recovered splendidly to square at the 14th. Nolan was one up with two to play, but Miss Pentony with her stroke at the home hole staved off defeat, Nolan taking a 5.

Clifford McMullan was only one over fours when he beat Miss Blake 4 and 2. The match between Miss Tiernan and W. Kinsella was featured by five stymies against the County Louth lady, two of which she laid herself. She was beaten 3 and 2, but Kinsella was then only one over fours. Mrs. O'Reilly, who got grand length with wood and iron, beat J. O'Neill 2 and 1 after turning 4 up, and good wins were also gained by Miss Carbery and the sisters Bermingham.

THE DUNLOP IRISH TOURNAMENT

The Dunlop Irish professional tournament will be played at Royal Belfast, Craigavad, on March 25 and 26, the conditions being 72 holes, strokes. The prize money, amounting to £75, is donated by the Dunlop Rubber Co., Ltd. The tournament is open to all professionals and assistants attached to recognised golf clubs. Entries close with W. Nolan, Portmarnock, on March 20.

WESTERN ISLES OPEN CHAMPIONSHIP

The announcement that the Western Isles open championship (the holder of which is P. J. Mahon, Royal Dublin), inaugurated so auspiciously last June, is not to be held this year will have come as a disappointment to many golfers. The sole reason for the decision, the promoters state, is that it was found impossible to arrange a date in June—the only suitable month from their point of view—which would not clash with other important fixtures.

SINGLE GOAL DECIDES

Munster Miss Their Chances in the Second Half

ULSTER..... 1 MUNSTER..... 0

By defeating Munster 1-nil at Londonbridge road yesterday Ulster took a further step towards winning the interprovincial championship, as they previously had a victory over Leinster to their credit. They did well to win this match, for after play had been in progress only a few minutes, G. N. Clarke, their outside-right, suffered a nasty facial injury, and was absent until ten minutes from the close, when he pluckily returned. Otherwise, Munster can consider themselves extremely unlucky to have lost. Play was quite even for the first half, but in the second period Munster did nearly all the attacking, and the Ulster goal had some very narrow escapes.

With rain falling heavily, and on a muddy pitch, Munster's hockey showed a vast improvement on previous years. There was little wild and indiscriminate hitting; instead, the backs directed their clearances to the best advantage, and the half-backs supported the forwards intelligently. The forwards were clever through the field, and frequently had the opposing defence puzzled, but they failed in the circle, their shooting being slow and inaccurate. In addition, the ball did not run kindly for them, but they could only blame themselves for their defeat.

MCCARTHY BRILLIANT

No fault could be found with their defence. McCarthy was splendid in goal, and was always ready to come out and smother an advancing forward, as well as making some fine saves. The backs were extremely sound. Begley doing particularly well in the second half, while Power, as usual, was a tower of strength at centre-half, and both Dove and Riordan marked the opposing forwards well, though their passing was not up to the same standard. The forwards combined really well up to a point, but when the final touch was needed, they could not supply it. Lilburn was the best of them, de Lacey spoiling some good runs by holding on too long. Russell and Swaine failed badly with several scoring chances.

Ulster shone principally in defence, where Dick showed such speed and anticipation that it was hard to believe that he first played for his country fourteen years ago. He played the biggest part in his side's victory, but his partner, Cleghorn, was very steady, and MacDonald gave every assistance, particularly in the second half. Hunter was only moderate at left half, but Jefferson, if rather crude in his methods, was most effective on the right. The forwards were naturally handicapped by Clarke's absence, but none of them impressed.

The solitary goal came mid-way through the first half, Jefferson scoring from a mêlée in the Munster goal-mouth. Munster had their chances in the second period, but Swaine and Lilburn failed when the equaliser seemed certain. Teams :—

Ulster—J. Carroll (Belfast Y.M.C.A.); W. M. Dick (Cliftonville), S. Cleghorn (Antrim); E. Jefferson (Lisnagarvey), J. MacDonald (North Down), S. Hunter (South Antrim); G. N. Clarke (Antrim), D. W. Hayes (Down), G. D. Smyth (Magee College), J. Moss (Queen's), J. Bowden (Lisnagarvey).

Munster—J. McCarthy (Pembroke Wanderers); R. Begley (Catholic Institute, Limerick), F. Graham (Limerick C.Y.), H. Dove (L.P.Y.M.A.), R. Power (Pembroke Wanderers), T. C. Riordan (Catholic Institute); S. de Lacey (L.P.Y.M.A.), G. B. Swaine (do.), S. Lilburn (do.), N. Russell (Old Grammarians), R. Barry (Harlequins).

CONNAUGHT'S FINE DISPLAY

LEINSTER ..... 3 CONNAUGHT ... 3

Though the Leinster side which opposed Connaught at Londonbridge road yesterday was not the strongest that could have been put into the field it was sufficiently good to make the performance of the western province, in securing a 3-3 draw, a most meritorious feat. This coming after their draw with Munster definitely marks a turn in the fortunes of Connaught, who have hitherto been more or less outclassed in the interprovincial series.

The game was played under conditions which did not suit the Leinster side, the ground being exceptionally heavy—in places almost waterlogged. This, naturally, nullified much of the advantage which Leinster might have been expected to have in stick-work and speed, but it does not detract from the great improvement shown by Connaught.

With an admirable defence, in which Croke supported very ably the solid work of his more experienced partner, Dolan; a hard-working half-back line, and forwards who were always attempting constructive attacks, Connaught held their own from start to finish, and showed great courage in overcoming the 3-1 lead which Leinster at one time possessed. Delaney and Russell, the inside men, and Smeaton, at outside-right, were particularly effective, while Coughlan showed himself to have a fast shot, though his sense of position was inclined to be faulty.

BACKS UNSTEADY

Felton and Craig were not as sound as usual at back for Leinster, and only Pilkington of the half-backs played up to his best form. The forwards did not seem to get going properly at any time, though Hennessey managed to get across some excellent centres.

O'Keeffe gave Leinster the lead in the first half with a rather soft ground shot which should have been saved. Purcell put them two up with a drive from a centre by Hennessey, but before half-time Russell sent a through pass to Coughlan, who crashed the ball into the net with a shot which left Cuffe standing.

Purcell from a corner increased Leinster's lead early in the second half, but Connaught fought back with great spirit, and goals by Coughlan and Smeaton enabled them to share the honours. Teams :—

Connaught—J. A. Chaffey; N. Croke, P. J. Dolan; N. Kelly, P. M. O'Keeffe, P. J. Loughlin; J. Smeaton, R. H. Russell, J. Coughlan, J. C. Delaney, J. Bolger.

Leinster—C. Cuffe (Dublin University); J. K. Craig (Dublin University), F. Felton (Corinthians); T. Barry (Naas), R. K. Pilkington (Three Rock Rovers), R. Rafter (Pembroke Wanderers); J. O'Keeffe (Corinthians), E. F. Duke (Corinthians) (captain), J. A. Purcell (Naas), E. Browitt (Corinthians), W. E. Hennessey (Railway Union).

Financial News & Notes

DUBLIN HARDER

IRISH INDUSTRIALS SUPPORTED

TRAMS AGAIN HIGHER

End-account influences tended to keep markets in check on the Dublin Stock Exchange yesterday, but local issues were again favoured and made fresh headway.

The Free State Funds held steady and British Funds hardened slightly.

In Banks, Provincial Old, on further good buying, rose 1s.

Guinness units shaded off, as did Distillers Ord. B. and 1. Steam Pref. advanced to 26s.

Great Northern Ord. recovered to 17 and Great Southern Deb. improved.

Dublin Tram Ord. rose 1s. 3d., but the recent rise in Alliance Gas Ord. brought in profit-taking and they lost 3s. 9d.

Switzer Ord. gained 2s., Todd Burns Pref. spurted 6s., and Irish-American Oil Pref. added several pence. Most other local Industrials recorded small gains.

R.A.T. Ord. improved to 123s. 9d. and Vickers Ord. recovered to 23s. 3d.

LONDON IRREGULAR

BRITISH RAILS GOOD

During the early hours of yesterday's session on the London Stock markets there was little sign of the cheerfulness which has prevailed of late, as very few buyers were about, and prices displayed a drooping tendency owing to end-account liquidation. Around midday, however, renewed support was encountered in several directions, with the result that the general atmosphere brightened and many quotations took an upward turn. Certain Oil shares became especially active and firm, while British Rails improved sharply in response to buying on dividend hopes.

BRITISH FUNDS

Gilt-edged, although quiet at first, kept firm, and a small volume of investment buying in later dealings was sufficient to bring about a further improvement in values.

RAILS

In the market for British Rails good support was accorded L.M.S. and Southern issues, buyers anticipating favourable dividend announcements in the near future. L.M.S. Ord. added 1¾ to 21¾, while the 1923 Pref. at 65¾ were 2 higher. The chief movement in Southerns was a rise of ¾ to 90½ in the Pref. Ord. Interest in Foreign Rails slackened and several issues came on offer and declined. Colonial and American Rails also quietened down and eased.

INDUSTRIALS

Industrials continued somewhat irregular, there being a number of good features, usually due to individual factors, and many losses, for which profit-taking was responsible. Considerable activity was again witnessed in Cable Stocks, and the Pref. rose to yet another record high level. Another good feature was a resumption of speculative buying in the Aviation section, and De Havillands closed appreciably better. In the Armament group suggestions that the company may pay a capital bonus brought about a good improvement in Vickers, while among Breweries Watney Defd. jumped sharply following the dividend announcement. Trans-Atlantics were on the dull side owing to easier trend on Wall street. Elsewhere British Oxygens fluctuated rather widely and eventually finished lower, while certain Electrical Equipments and Building issues were other dull spots.

MINES

The tone in the Mining markets was dull owing to profit-taking, this reason accounting for an almost general decline in Kaffirs. The feature in an otherwise uninteresting West African group was a spurt in Bibiani following the meeting. Other Gold shares disclosed few features and the majority of movements in Base Metals were unfavourable.

OILS

Interest in Oil shares was centred mainly on Burmahs and "Twin Eagles," and the former, after changing hands freely, closed substantially higher. Anglo-Iranian and a few others were well supported, however, and the market finished firm.

THE INDUSTRIAL MARKET

ARMAMENT SHARES ACTIVE

Although preliminary arrangements for the carry-over on Monday slowed down business to some extent in the Industrial market yesterday, a satisfactory turnover was reported. A certain amount of profit-taking occurred, but, despite this, a number of bright spots developed.

Cable and Wireless stocks continued in demand, the Preferred reaching a new high level, partly in anticipation of a scheme to deal with dividend arrears and partly on reports that the earnings position is improving.

After being rather uncertain in their movements, the trans-Atlantic counters developed fresh strength after official hours in the "street" in response to New York advices. Brazilian Tractions went ahead to 13½, while Steels rose to 49¾.

For reasons stated above there was a further demand for Cable and Wireless stocks. The Preference eventually finished a point higher.

BRIGHT SPOTS.

Good features were provided among Iron and Steel descriptions by Vickers and Hadfields. The former continued in strong request on talk of a possible bonus issue, and the price advanced to 24s., while renewed buying of Hadfields raised the price to 22s. 9d. Among other firm spots may be mentioned Cammell Lairds, Chinese Engineering, and Whitehead Iron.

Business in Aviation and kindred descriptions was selective rather than general. The strength of De Havillands was unimpaired, further good buying resulting in an improvement of 2s. 9d. Rolls-Royce came into renewed demand and put on 3s.

Electrical Equipments continue to receive attention, but early firmness was followed by moderate realisations. Following the sharp advance of the preceding day, Enfield Cables suffered from profit-taking.

BREWERIES BETTER.

Breweries came in for renewed attention towards the close. Following the increase in the Watney interim from 5 to 6 per cent., the £1 Deferred units finished 3s. to the good at 82s. 9d. Meuxs Ordinary rallied to 51s. 6d.

Tobaccos seemed rather undecided. "Imps" improved to 7⅜, and Godfrey Phillips hardened a few pence; but Gallahers and United Souths lost ground.

There was not much activity among Textiles, and prices closed steady. William Hollins met with further enquiry around 41s. 6d., while Coats hardened to 65s. 7½d.

Among Rayons, Courtaulds came in for some support up to 60s. 3d., while British Celanese hardened to 14s. 7½d.

In the Stores section Woolworths had buyers at 120s. 3d., but there was no change in Marks and Spencers.

UNILEVERS REACT.

Among Provision and Catering Shares United Dairies were enquired for, but Unilevers reacted.

In the Shipping section E. D. and R. M. Realisation Ordinaries improved at first on the repayment of the 4 per cent. Stocks. Prices eased later, and showed little change on balance.

The Miscellaneous section was little affected by the usual end-account influences, and prices as a rule showed little change. British Oxygens were subject to a fair amount of profit-taking following the bonus declaration, and lost ⅜; but Turner and Newalls remained unchanged, and Imperial Chemicals hardened. Cement issues held around previous levels, but London Bricks slipped back.

OILS ADVANCE

Advices received overnight from New York having shown American Oil stocks to have been irregular on Thursday, the Oil share market opened quietly yesterday. It was not long, however, before the market once more got into its stride, the lead again being given by the Eagle issues. Not only were Mexican Eagles the subject of active attention, but Canadian Eagle took up the running, the view being held that the latter had been overlooked in view of the increased production of the Mexican company, which indicates expansion in the marketing business of the Canadian company. Although closing prices were below the best owing to moderate profit-taking sales, both shares showed improvements on balance. Continental operators came in good buyers of International counters, among which Mexican and Canadian Eagles were prominent, while Shells and Royal Dutch were well bought.

RUBBERS SUBDUED

With professional and public demand remaining small, conditions in the Rubber share market yesterday were again quiet, and quotations displayed an easier trend owing to further profit-taking. Kuala Lumpur and Sedenak received active support, however, and finished higher, while adverse changes were rarely large. Trading in the commodity section was slow and spot rubber sold down to 6½d. per lb. It is estimated that United Kingdom rubbers stocks have increased by 400 tons during the past week.

STRONG CLOSE IN STOCKS

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

NEW YORK, Friday.

Wall street thought to-day that the Washington scene still presented a confusing picture. But yesterday's set-back was regarded as being in the nature of a healthy correction, with the result that the Stock Exchange list more than recovered its loss. Sales totalled 3,300,000 shares.

The market turned firmer in the afternoon under the leadership of Rail, Utility, Steel, and Chemical stocks, substantial gains being shown by Atchison, National Steel, American Can, Continental Can, and Chrysler. The advance broadened in the later dealings, and the market closed strong. Gains extending to 2 dollars were recorded by the Rail, Steel, and Chemical groups, while advances of fractions to 1 were shown by the Industrial, Utility, Oil, Motor, Copper, and Merchandising sections. Three and four-point gains were registered by a few of the pivotal issues.

Call money was unchanged at ½ per cent., and the rate on the outside market was unaltered at ½ per cent. to ¾ per cent. Prime paper was quoted at ¾ to 1 per cent. Open market discount rates were unchanged.

Sterling exchange opened ¼c. down at 5.00⅜, but improved to 5.00½ during the morning. The rate remained at this level in the afternoon, but finally advanced and closed unchanged, compared with the previous close, at 5.00⅝.

Silver was unchanged at 44⅜c.
